Northwestern has been moving forward in a current of progress since Dr. Jim Henderson's investiture last spring.

Students visibly have more school spirit. "The importance of being invested in their collegiate experience and what that means for the university is that it has been the springboard that has really motivated our students to get involved," Director of Student Activities Yonna Pasch said.

The excitement on campus has been enhanced by the visual additions of purple and white signs around campus. "The revamped logos that we use for signage [on campus] are great and I think small touches like that are slowly but surely make our university better," Student Government Association President Matthew Whittaker said.

"Students are even more involved on campus with 112 Registered Student Organizations active on Org Sync compared to last year's 80," Pasch said. Pasch believes that the trend has been initiated by the student-centered learning environment that Henderson has created.

"Students care more than they have in the past" Whittaker said. "You are hearing their concerns and what they like, you are seeing our students have a voice, and they are not afraid to talk to administration and they're not afraid to talk to their peers about problems they may be having."

In contrast to years past, administrators and faculty are joining in on the student conversations by responding either in person or online, Whittaker said. Professors are even participating in campus activities and encouraging their students to do the same.

"Change doesn't have to happen now, it has to happen yesterday," Pasch said regarding how quickly campus changes occur.

Henderson's forward thinking has helped the University move to new heights. "Society is changing and progressing quickly," Henderson said. "The power of social networks promises continual and unpredictable cultural change, but often in positive ways. NSU is preparing students for a world that looks completely different from today."

Regardless of the pace, the changes are helping the university progress into the future and move forward in new directions.

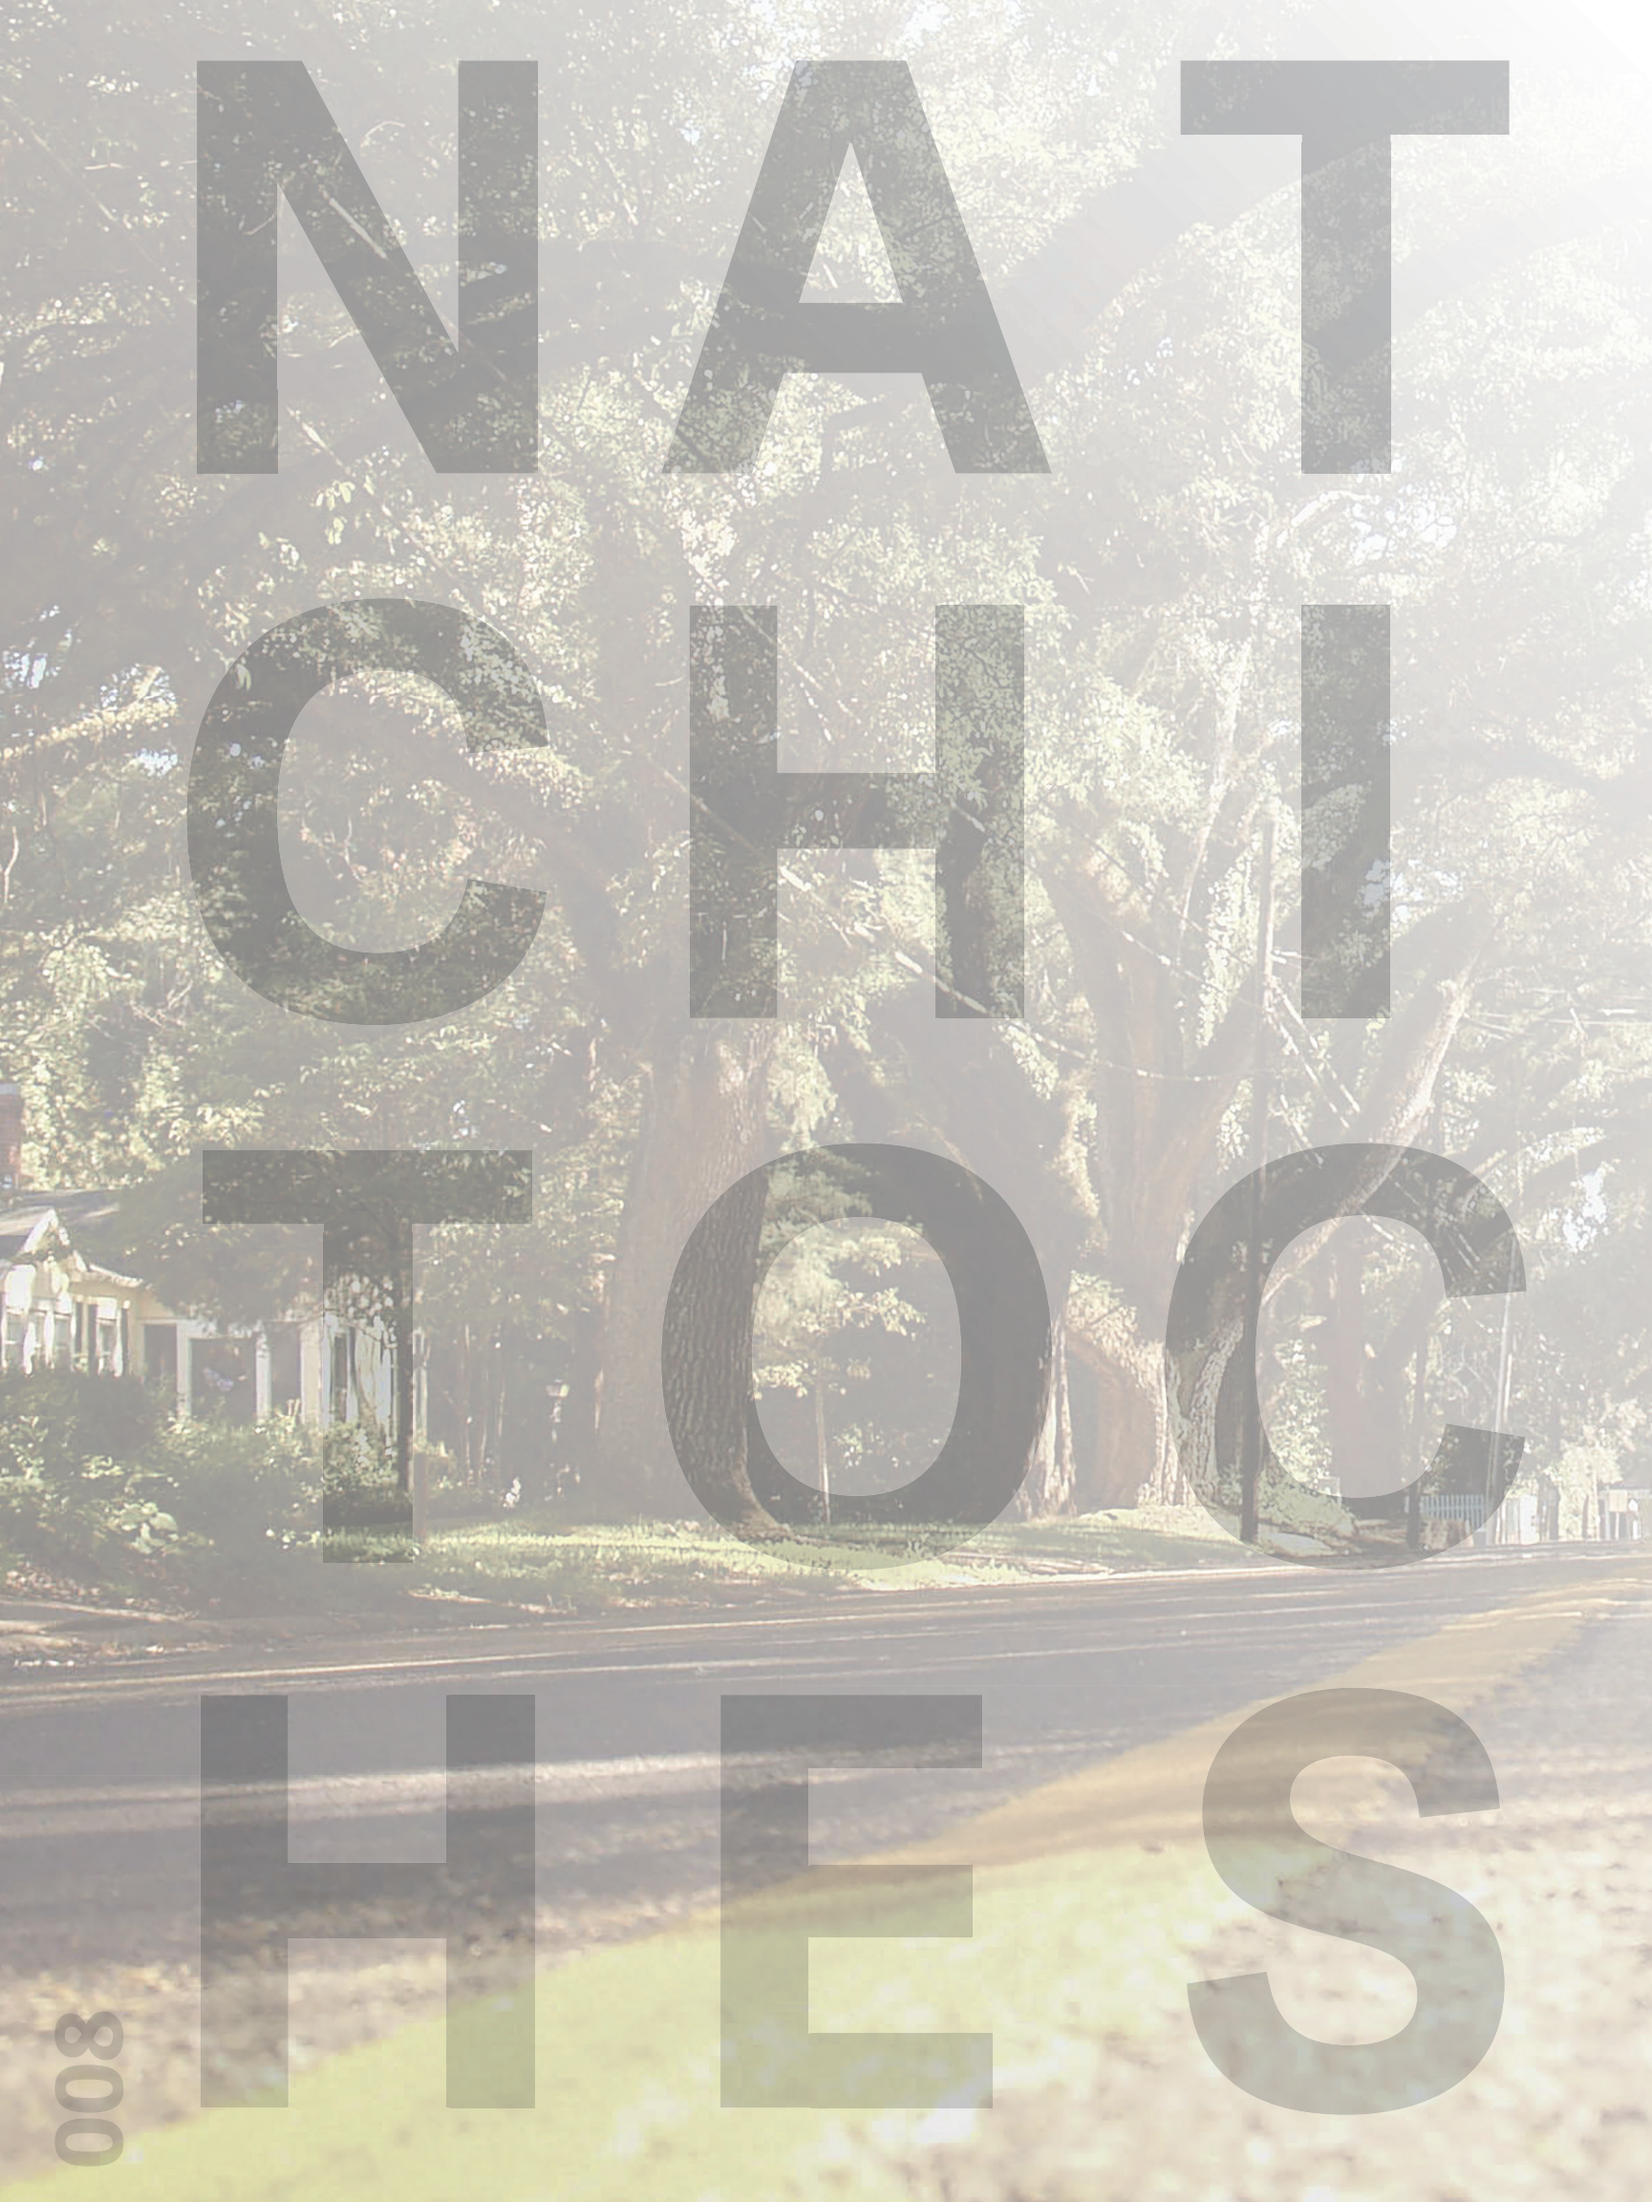
WESTERN STA



NATCHITOCHES

Named USA Today's
Best Southern Small Town

With attractions like Melrose Plantation, the Steel Magnolia House, a downtown walking tour and plenty of locally owned restaurants, tourists easily become connected to this historic town. Tourists from all around the country find comfort in the welcoming atmosphere and visit frequently. Perhaps this would be expected of USA Today's Best Southern Small Town of 2015.

Enjoying a summer stroll down Front Street, Derrell Rogersan, an Arkansas native, expressed his love for the unique restaurants. "I like to eat!" he said when asked about his favorite activities. "It really is a beautiful town and I enjoy seeing the historic buildings and taking a relaxing walk along the river." Though he was here on business, Rogers made it clear that pleasure is definitely involved. "I like to schedule my meetings in Natchitoches because it truly is the best small town."

"I was drawn to Natchitoches and Northwestern because of the small, tight-knit campus and community," junior Alyssa Buker said. "Coming here from Baton Rouge was a definite culture shock, but I enjoy being around so many warm and welcoming people. I really did find a second family here in Natchitoches."

Though a small town, Natchitoches brings as many as 60,000 people together each weekend during the Christmas season—80,000 during the annual Christmas Festival. Commonly referred to as "The City of Lights," Natchitoches easily lights up lives.

New Website

Same Traditions

nsula.edu

New president, new programs and now a new website. The feeling of change around NSU's campus is spreading online. NSU's main website underwent a facelift in July and is getting all sorts of feedback.

NSU, the leader in online degrees offered in Louisiana, revamped their website to be more user friendly and modern.

Director of Marketing and Branding Cole Gentry, who led the redesign, is excited about the way the site turned out. The Potpourri sat down with Gentry for a Q&A about the new website.

> Story: Jessie Gabor

Q. How long did the process of redesigning take?

A. Redesign of the university website started in January 2015. A collaborative team effort of President Henderson, Ron Wright, Joe Parrie, Phil Gillis and myself contributed to the successful launch date of July 1, 2015 – a six-month process. It is not, by any means, a finished product. We have ample work to do and we look forward to completing the other phases here in the imminent future.

Q. How has the feedback for the redesign been?

A. With any new release of a product offering, feedback is ever-important. Currently, we have received positive and encouraging feedback from our viewers. Navigation is much easier and we have entered the world of modern and aesthetically-pleasing design. Features that are not currently present, but will be added in the near future, are a(n): internal search engine, dynamic digital course catalog and an online viewbook.

Q. How do you think the redesign will help current and future students?

A. The redesign of the Northwestern State University website brings the site into the modern-day era. The new format not only looks more appealing, but is also more compatible with the various devices used by individuals accessing it. With an intuitive and responsive layout, current and future students will be able to effortlessly locate the material they need as well as contact information for the departments in which they are interested. The overall user experience of the university website has been greatly improved and, visually, it is more attractive than ever before.

Q. Do you think the new website is reflective of the move the university as a whole is taking? If so, why?

A. The redesign of the university website aligns with the primary institutional objectives. We believe we are meeting the needs of all students -- future, current and former. The development and enhancement of the university brand continues to excel. We will remain steadfast on serving the needs of our students, faculty and staff.

Constructing Campus

Fixing the cracks and building the future

As students returned to Northwestern State University this fall, they returned to a campus in the process of renovations. Even the Long Purple Line, a hall of distinction for alumni of the university, has been redecorated with new flooring and lavender walls that draw attention to its members.

Past Changes:

NSU has experienced many improvements that have transformed the campus and given it more functionality and school spirit. These changes were about creating, "a warm inviting campus environment," said University President Dr. Jim Henderson. "We want students to be proud to be at Northwestern." Some changes, such as repaving the parking lot of Prather Coliseum, were not only aesthetically pleasing, but also necessary for the student body. The repaved Prather parking lot is a large parking area for NSU athletic events and is also used by the Spirit of Northwestern marching band to practice for football games.

In early August, the intersection of Caspari Street and Sam Sibley Drive was converted into a four-way stop. Several speed bumps on campus, that were responsible for some damaged cars last year, were also removed. A presidential tailgate area was added to the back of Caspari Hall.

Works In Progress:

Students saw more construction throughout the 2015-2016 school year. One of the first projects was to improve lighting on campus by adding lighting fixtures to Organizational Row, and replace defective light bulbs with free replacement bulbs from Sylvania. Henderson said that after the fixtures are in place, campus will be assessed again for additional lighting needs.

The Alley and the bridge of the Student Union should also be repaired by the end of spring semester, according to Henderson. The City of Natchitoches will also be dredging Chaplin's Lake and installing a filtration system to keep the lake clean for years to come. The project is expected to reach completion by March 2016, Henderson added.

Plans for the Future:

The renovations this year are by no means an end to the changes on campus. Other changes that Henderson hopes to enact at NSU in the following years include constructing a new student activities center, a building to replace Kyser Hall, and renovations to Varnado Hall.

These building projects will be made possible through Sen Gerald Long's efforts to attain state funding for building and repairing campus facilities, Vice President of University Affairs Dr. Marcus Jones said.

While not all of the plans to change campus in the coming years are certain, the motive is, "to facilitate students realizing their dreams," said Henderson. Senior Shelby "Alex" Andre said, "Dr. Henderson has gone out of his way to make our campus as great as we all knew it could be. The improvements have only enhanced our school environment. I mean who isn't ecstatic that those dang speed bumps are gone?"

To Henderson, it is not enough to meet student expectations of campus; he also wants to exceed them. It seems Northwestern is doing this by creating a campus that is dedicated to students achieving their goals.

The Alley in the Student Union will undergo construction to become a new space for students.

Diversity on Campus

Peaceful demonstration moves from social media to campus

Students brought the hashtag "#concernedstudents" off the Twitter sphere and onto Kyser Brickway for a peaceful demonstration. In the educational protest, or "teach-in" as students called it, protesters peacfully sat and marched back and forth on Kyser Brickway, expressing their want for love and change on campus. The students weren't allowed to march around campus as originally planned because of guidelines in the Student Handbook, but they marched on the Kyser Brickway, chanting and holding signs that spectators couldn't ignore or "swipe" like a Tindr profile.

Students marched with posters decorated with boldly marked statements that included, "Our Culture is Not a Costume," and "Intent is Irrelevant — One Person's Humor is Another's Hurt." The protesters represented students from all across campus including the Feminist Majority Leadership Alliance, NSULA Pride, the Brainy Acts Poetry Society, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and more.

"I think [the teach-in] is important because student voices have to be heard," Dean Frances Conine said. "You're the new culture — the new generation. What you think, and feel and believe matters. It's why you're here."

> Story: Ashley Wolf

In response to a social media controversy that went viral at NSU, students at the teach-in took a stand for cultural diversity and gender inclusivity.

Freshman Connection

As many students prepare to move into their dorms, schedule classes and pick out their first day outfit, a group of dedicated students have been preparing for their arrival. They are the NSU Freshman Connectors.

The Freshman Connectors or "connectors," as they are commonly referred to, prepare an entire semester for the arrival of over 1,200 new students. The process begins in September during the first round of interviews and continues through the month of November. The final list is presented in early December and the connectors begin their semester-long journey.

Many students see the connectors around campus, plastered on billboards and publications, but their contributions to Northwestern State far exceed any expectation. "All of the skits, decorations, new student packets and schedules don't happen overnight," Emilie King, junior, said. "This process takes an entire semester and we all dedicate our summer to accomplishing the task."

The incoming students experienced the real NSU life in only a two-day span. "Once I was here and was in my color group with my connectors, Mikey and Leighann, I knew I couldn't see myself at any other university where they could care as much as Northwestern, " said Jenni Wilson, freshman.

For some connectors who did not stay in Natchitoches over the summer, commuting back and forth during connection dates might have been difficult, but connector Thomas Marlborough said, "The reward at the end of every connection was worth the five hour driver once or twice a month."

As the first thing incoming students experience at NSU, the Freshman Connectors always have to be ready for anything that comes their way and they must maintain their drive, which is fueled by their love and Demon pride for Northwestern State University.

The tradition continues

Starting college can be a very scary thing for most freshmen, especially if they are moving away from home. NSU had two weeks filled with things to do to welcome the new students. The annual Whiteout Game was played against the Southeastern State University Lions. Freshman have an important role at every first home game. The freshmen run out onto the field at Turpin Stadium and create a tunnel for the Demon football players to run through.

Freshmen enjoy participating in the inferno year after year cheering on the Demons. Destiny Simon, a freshmen criminal justice major, said "It was a great experience. I enjoyed showing my NSU spirit with the rest of the 2019 class!" Blake Blanchard, a freshman communication major, said "I had such a fun time in the inferno. I put on purple war paint and a white bandana and was ready to show my Demon pride. Running on the field with my classmates, and cheering on our football team was a pretty cool feeling. I have never been more proud to be an NSU Demon!"

Homecoming

Lipsync

No matter what organization one is a part of, there's no denial that Lipsync is one of the most competitive, fun and exciting events on campus. One of Northwestern State University's many traditions for Homecoming Week is Lipsync. The Lipsync competition consists of students' dancing, acting and lip syncing to songs. To go along with this year's Hunger Games homecoming theme, Lipsync was referred to as "The Games" portion of the Homecoming Games.

The Student Activities Board planned and facilitated the event, which included an emcee performance by Dakaboom. Lipsync is open to both students and the general public. This year's attendance was bigger than last year with over 1,400 people attending. Expected overflow resulted in the event being live streamed in the Student Union Ballroom.

According to Student Activities Board Representative Olivia Guidry, Lipsync is one of homecoming's biggest events. "This year instead of having to turn people away, we wanted to give everyone a chance to be able to watch it, so we decided to do a livestream video in the Student Union Ballroom," Guidry said.

Numerous NSU Registered Student Organizations participated in the event: Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Phi Alpha, Crew, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Make Your Own Theatre, Phi Mu, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, President's Leadership Program, Student Athlete Advisory Committee, Sigma Nu, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Theta Chi.

The RSOs were split into three categories: general, fraternity and sorority. The first place winner of the general division was Make Your Own Theatre. President's Leadership Program placed second, and Student Athlete Advisory Committee placed third in this division. Kappa Sigma and Pi Kappa Alpha tied for first place in the fraternity division. Third place went to Pi Kappa Phi.

Trey Kolb, member of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity, recalled his favorite part of Lipsync as being, "the actual performance because of all the hard work we put in during the week and seeing that pay off was really cool."

Winning first place in the sorority division was Sigma Sigma Sigma. Taylor Roberts, new member of Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority, described her first lipsync experience saying, "It was a little crazy and chaotic, but it was fun being able to be around all my sisters for a whole week practicing and getting ready for it. When the day came it was a big release going show what we had practiced so hard for."

Phi Mu took home second place in the sorority division, and Alpha Omicron Pi took home third place.

Alongside Lipsync performances, the Homecoming Honeys competition occurred where two students represent an RSO as their Homecoming Honeys and perform a dance, song or skit. This year's Homecoming Honeys winner was Sigma Sigma Sigma.

The Mockingjay Award, which was voted on by the students on their favorite performance of the night, was awarded to Phi Mu Fraternity.

The Tribute Award was created by the King and Queen and Mr. and Mrs. NSU Matthew Whitaker and Brittany McConathy to raise money to help rebuild a school for Nepali Girls. The organization that raised the most money and the winner of the Tribute Award was Sigma Sigma Sigma.

The

Mr. & Miss NSU a

What was your favorite part of Homecoming Week and why?

Brittany: I loved every aspect of Homecoming Week, but I would say that my favorite was lip sync, I was Effie. The Homecoming Court became so close and had fun. Matthew and myself as King and Queen decided that this year's court would focus our lip sync on the theme and get crowd participation. Each court "pair/couple" represented a district, which in return got that "district" RSO yelling and excited. The Homecoming Court had an absolute blast throughout the whole process and loved watching what all the other organizations came up with.

Matthew: My favorite part of Homecoming Week was the many LipSync practices that I had with the Homecoming Court. All of the late nights of laughing or being frustrated because we couldn't get the dance right was a lot of fun. It's awesome when you can put so many campus leaders in one room and all of us work together to put on a great performance.

How does it feel to be elected both NSU 2015 Homecoming Queen/ King and 2015 Miss/Mr. NSU?

Brittany: Honestly, it feels like a dream come true. My love for NSU is out of this world, so to represent our university on this level is AMAZING! When I moved here in the fall of 2011, Demon Land became my home!

Matthew: It means a lot to be elected to both titles. It's one of those awards that you work for from the very first day you step on campus. To see my peers elect me to the highest honor an undergraduate can receive is quite humbling.

What do you think led to your election(s) to these titles?

Brittany: I think that me being involved and working hard in every aspect of campus got me elected. Anyone that knows me would say that I bleed purple and pour my whole heart into everything I'm involved in.

Matthew: I think the way I was raised and my own personal morals and ethics. I was brought up to be very humble, but to also be a hardworking individual. If I see something I want, I go get it. No questions asked. Those qualities are rare and I think my drive and determination have really bolstered my collegiate success.

Is there anything you would like to tell the student body?

Brittany: Enjoy your time here at NSU! Don't wish it away because as soon as you blink it's over. I graduate in December of this year and it feels like just yesterday I was moving into University Place 2 getting ready to take on my first day of college. This has truly been the best years of my life and all of the credit goes to NSU.

Matthew: Thank you for all that you do. The students of our institution are what make NSU the home for thousands of awesome scholars. Continue to stay involved and engaged in the movement that our school is taking. We're going places that no one has ever seen.

During Homecoming Week, you both used your positions to promote Empower Nepali Girls. Can you tell me more about this, and why you chose it as your platform? What ways have you benefitted this so far? Do you have plans to continue promoting it?

Brittany: Matthew and myself felt that we could do more than just have the titles of King and Queen/Mr. And Miss NSU. We wanted to give back to someone... somewhere. We are trying to raise a total of $3,500 to send to Nepal and have a school in Northwestern's name. The $3,500 will build a safe learning space and fill it with supplies for these young girls. So far we've blasted social media, have hosted a crowd rise account for donations, had a booth set up at Rocking on the Riverbank and established the "Tribute Award" for the RSO that raised the most money during LipSync, which was won by Sigma Sigma Sigma. We are 1/3 of the way so far to our goal! We are very excited! Yes, we will continue to promote this worthy cause through May of 2016. We know that with the help of faculty, staff and most importantly, students we can reach our goal and have a school in honor of NSU in Nepal.

Matthew: I was inspired by Dr. Moulton's love for the Empower Nepali Girls movement. We sat down and I told her that I wanted to do something big with the title and we agreed on raising money for the ENG Organization. We have plans to continue fundraising through our online page, and will be at various campus sporting events promoting our fundraiser. We would also like to have more pop up booths at various downtown festivals.

Tailgating Traditions

At the end of a long fall week, nothing beats tailgating before a Northwestern State University football game. Tailgating at NSU consists of an afternoon full of food, friends and fun before heading into Turpin Stadium to cheer on the Demons.

Greek Life, NSU Alumni and ROTC are a few groups among many organizations that pitch tents in the tailgating area. A separate student tailgating section closer to Turpin was added this year. Sororities, fraternities and any student who wants to hang out and chill before a game can enjoy this separate area just for them.

While catching up with friends, students tailgating enjoy a game of washers, eat a hotdog or two and listen to music. Tailgating is the perfect place to get pepped up for the game and prepare to bring Demon spirit to the stands.

Taylor Walker, a senior at NSU, said, "I enjoy tailgating at Northwestern because it is the greatest way for me to show my school spirit while also having the best time meeting other people and hanging out with my AOII sisters."

No matter the major, year or organization affiliation, all students have the opportunity to come together and enjoy tailgating as a Northwestern State University family. After graduation, students continue to come back to tailgate as alumni and reminisce with old friends before heading over to Turpin Stadium to watch their alma mater's football team play.

Natchitoches Style

Hollywood portrays college as a giant four-year party. Hundreds of red solo cups are held by scantily clad, reckless young adults who are jumping, or falling, into swimming pools.

Real college kids know the truth. College is three hours of sleep, trying to buy the right scantron two minutes before class and pleading with our teachers to make that 89.4 percent an 'A'.

"Hollywood lied to us!" we say. But maybe these movies are telling us something: put down the books for a second and let loose for a night.

The idea of a crowded club filled with body odor and music louder than the god siren may not sound appealing to everyone, but Natchitoches has something for every party style. Whether you enjoy turtlenecks and Simon & Garfunkel or thrive on Malibu and Nicki Minaj, your own version of fun is waiting for you.

Students who prefer a relaxed night out with friends visit the Pioneer Pub on Front Street. "The Pub is my favorite place to go," senior Brandon Manuel said. "I like the atmosphere and it has beer on draft."

Once a week, The Pioneer Pub features a local band. "Thursday nights are the best because there is live music," said junior Annie Dauzat. "They also have wonderful food. If you feel sad, go eat a wookie." A wookie is a plate of delicious homemade fries with brisket and melted cheese.

The Body, located on the La. Hwy. 1 Bypass, is ideal for students who prefer a club atmosphere. It is a popular spot for Greeks to mingle.

Antoon's, right next to The Body, is where students go after an exhausting night of dancing and selfie-taking.

For students looking to save money and avoid driving, house parties are the way to go. "You can walk there and it's a safer environment, junior Logan Terrell said. "It's a better chance to meet people you usually wouldn't see on campus."

"I love house parties. I live for them," Annie Dauzat said. "Themed parties are my favorite. Nothing makes me happier than going to Walmart and trying to put a costume together."

On the other end of the spectrum, sometimes a zen evening of eating entire bags of chips and binge-watching Netflix is all a weary college student desires. "For the most part, I just like hanging out in the living room and talking to my friends," Manuel said.

Although the harsh realities of essays, the size of small books and 8 a.m. classes have jaded our young minds, remember that adulthood is approaching and wearing sweatpants every day isn't cute when you're 45. Don't let college fly by without stopping to celebrate your young adult existence. Find your own version of the college pool party. Make your own fun.

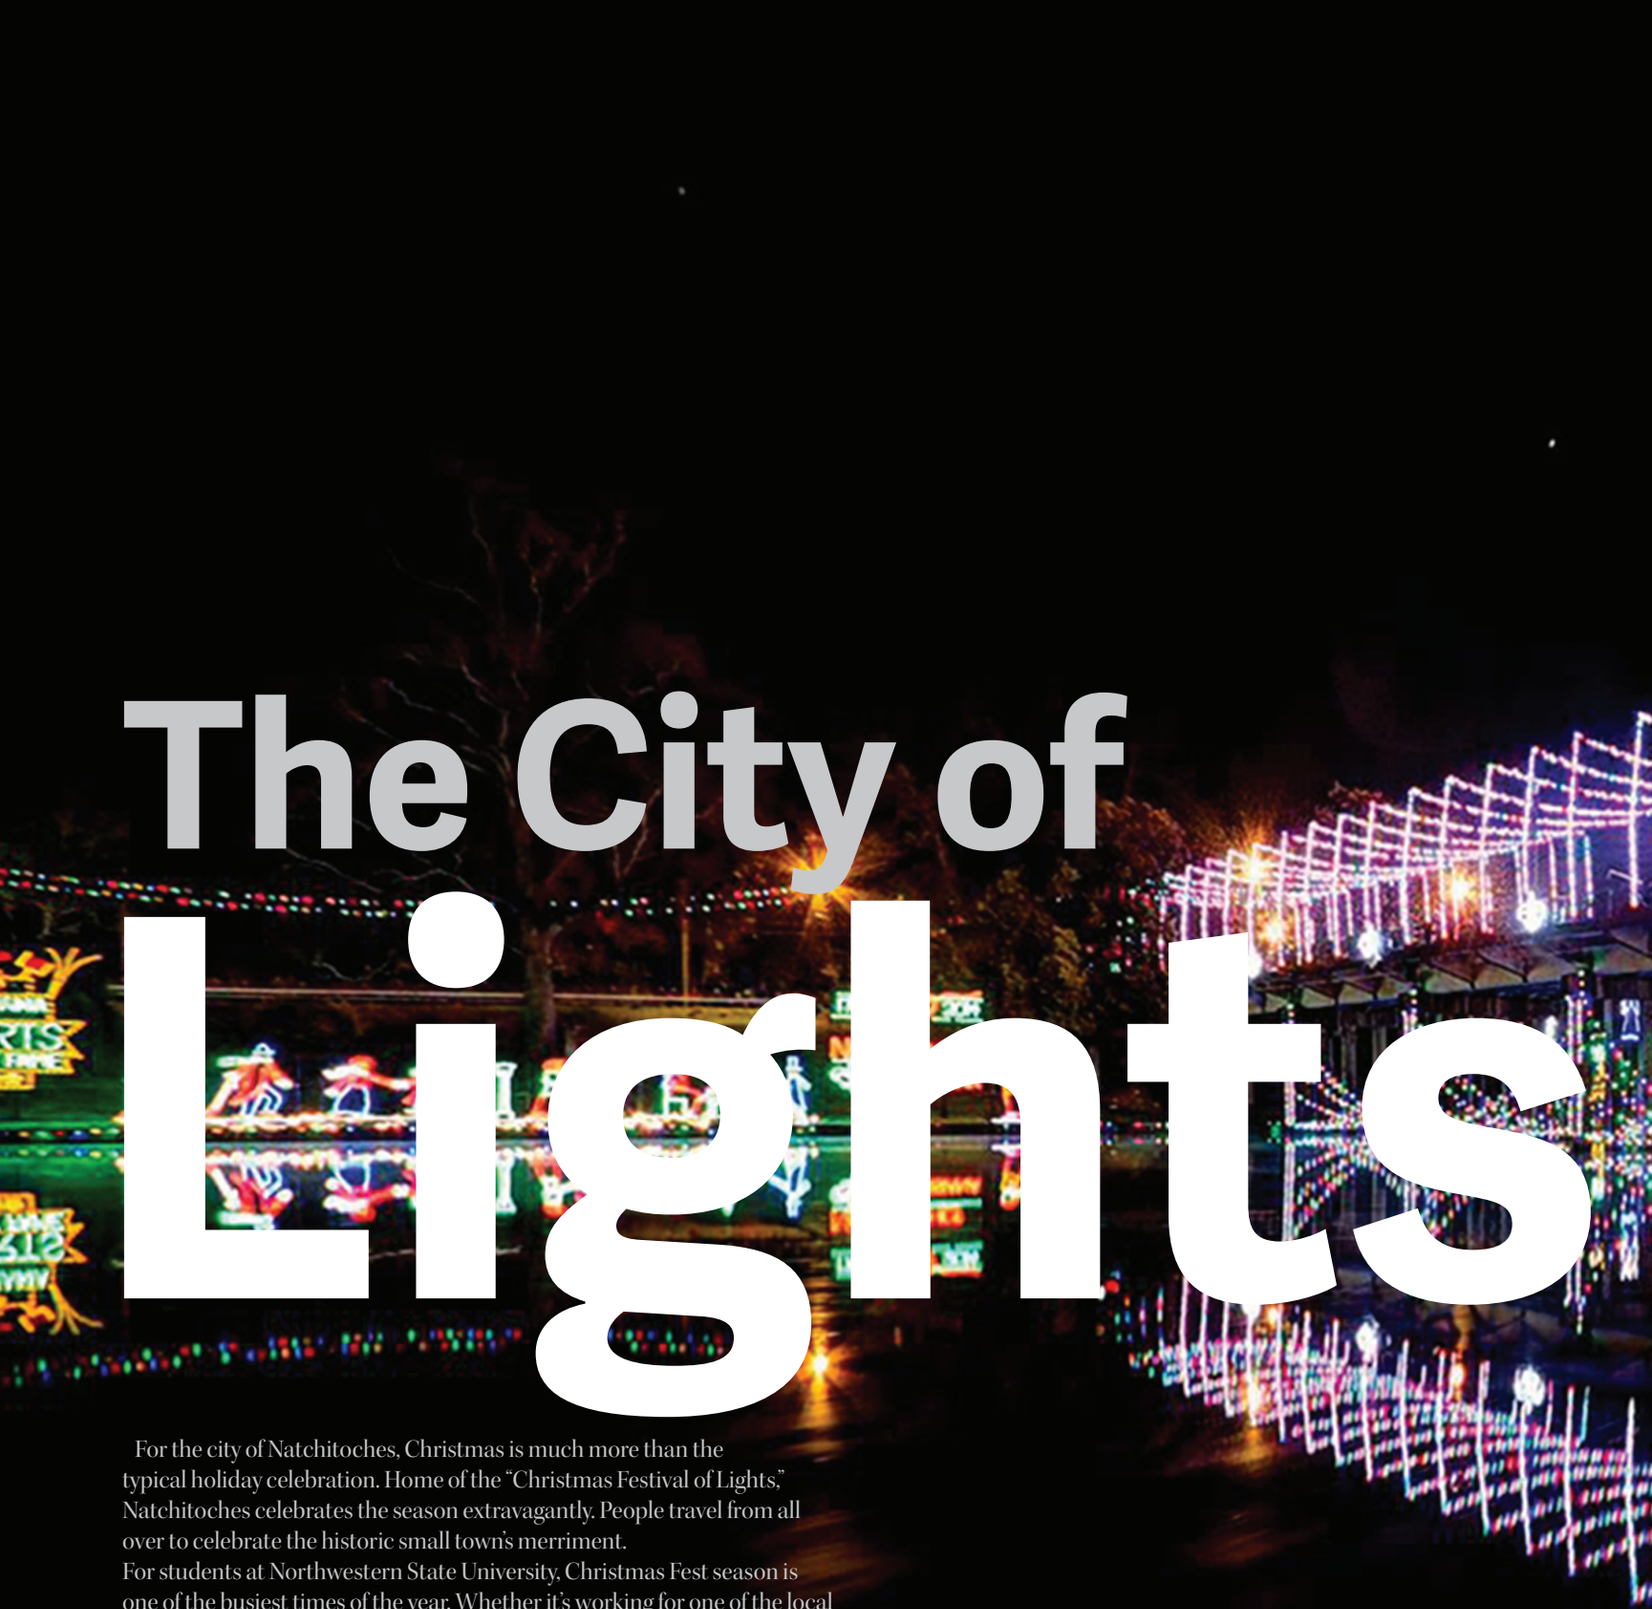
The City of Lights



For the city of Natchitoches, Christmas is much more than the typical holiday celebration. Home of the "Christmas Festival of Lights," Natchitoches celebrates the season extravagantly. People travel from all over to celebrate the historic small town's merriment.

For students at Northwestern State University, Christmas Fest season is one of the busiest times of the year. Whether it's working for one of the local shops or restaurants that receive heavy traffic from all of the out-of-town guests or being a tourist in their own town with all of the fun activities to do on Front Street, it's a celebration appreciated by all.

Houses colorfully decorated for the Christmas season line Front Street. Freshman at NSU Virginia Falgoust said, "So far my favorite part about Christmas in Natchitoches has just been seeing all the houses participating in decorating and seeing all the Christmas decorations and everyone on Front Streets seems to be a little bit happier and the Christmas spirit has been spreading around."

Besides beautiful lights that set the holiday mood, Natchitoches' Christmas Festival offers something for everyone, whether it's shopping, eating or simply strolling down Front Street.

Throughout December, many activities coincide with the festival, such as the Miss Merry Christmas Pageant, entertainment on the riverbank and the 5k run. On Saturday nights, attending the firework display is a popular attraction.

Northwestern State University Junior Darrion Tregre said, "I love the food and the fireworks the best I think. And spending time with friends and family."

With so many people coming from out of town, some Northwestern State University students avoid the chaos of the festival. However, many students brave the traffic and enjoy the festivities, crowds and all.

Many students celebrate the Christmas Parade by attending Kappa Alpha Order's Christmas on the Hill. Junior Criminal Justice major and member of KA Caleb Cowan said, "My favorite thing about Christmas in Natchitoches in general is it's pretty much what brings the town together."

The Christmas Festival makes the holidays something special for the citizens of Natchitoches, students at NSU and all of the guests who travel to see the city light up in celebration.

27th Annual

Christmas Gala

The 27th annual Northwestern State Christmas Gala was the climax of the fall semester. Students returned from Thanksgiving Break ready to kick off the Christmas holidays with the Christmas Gala. NSU's CAPA Department of Music, Theatre and Dance come together to perform in the most raved about show on campus.

The CAPA students performed in nine shows on campus within three days. These shows ranged from mornings to nights and were seen by NSU students, children from the local schools, professors, alumni, family members, people of the Natchitoches community and, of course, Dr. Henderson. This year Gala was taken on the road to perform in Shreveport at the Historic Strand Theatre. Gala opened the week before finals, meaning students in CAPA have to perform and somehow study for finals. Eric Bourg, a music education major and member of the chamber choir, said "Despite rehearsals lasting until 10 p.m. and having to perform shows in the middle of finals, the cheer that is spread to the audience and the satisfaction of putting on a great show dramatically outweighs the costs of being in Gala."

Many hours of work and practicing go into making Gala. From painting backdrops, learning the dances, practicing singing songs, perfecting the perfect alligator walk and so much more. One part of Gala that is very important is the orchestra. All of the music for Gala is played live from the pit by the Northwestern Orchestra. Taylor Spencer, a viola player in the orchestra, said "Having to play all the music for the entire show live means extensive amounts of practicing to make sure everything is perfect for the show."

Besides getting into the festive holiday mood, Gala has taught and given things to the performers as well as the viewers. "Having to navigate a large scale production has taught me a lot about stage etiquette, quick changes and taking care of myself in order to last nine performances in three days," said Leanny Munoz, a Liberal Arts major with a concentration in Fine and Preforming Arts.

Being in Gala year after year can be hard to let go of once you graduate. Taylor Walker, double major in Psychology and Theatre with a concentration in Dance, performed for her fourth year in Gala. She said, "The thing I will miss the most about Gala are the morning shows for the school kids in Natchitoches and the surrounding areas. Their reactions when we come out on stage are so uplifting and gives us all the energy we need to perform to the best of our ability."

Northwestern State University

Lady of the Bracelet

Northwestern State University put on its annual beauty pageant in January, and another Phi Mu sister proudly took home the title of Miss LOB: Marissa McMickens.

Miss Louisiana 2015, April Nelson, announced for the evening, and Student Activities Board sponsored this year's event.

After a one-on-one question session, a talent showcase, a swimsuit and an evening gown competition, McMickens was crowned.

"It still hasn't hit me that I'm Miss Northwestern's Lady of the Bracelet 2016," McMickens said.

McMickens has competed in LOB for the past three years and has gotten first runner up every year, before her final competition in 2016. She said that this is the best birthday present she has ever received, seeing as her 21st birthday was just days after the pageant.

Five of the past six winners have been members of Phi Mu fraternity, including McMickens. According to her, this trend reveals "the confidence Phi Mu girls carry."

"Phi Mu has a lot to offer, and we work hard for what we want," McMickens explained. This year, four girls from Phi Mu competed against each other: McMickens, Lincoln Pearce, Faith Stanfield and Kayla Richards.

"It was amazing to have them up there with me, "McMickens said, "Kayla is new to Phi Mu, so I wouldn't have been able to meet her in the way I did without this competition. Lincoln and Faith are actually my pledge sisters, so I knew they were there to support me, and I actually had 11 sisters on stage with me that day to support me."

McMickens will represent Northwestern for 2016; this qualifies as a preliminary for Miss Louisiana, which is a preliminary for Miss America. McMickens is extremely grateful and ready to move on to Miss Louisiana this year.

McMickens was not the only winner. The talent portion of the pageant was won by Chelsey Goldsmith, who performed a comedic monologue displaying her acting talents.

"Winning is such a blessing," Goldsmith said. She affirmed that she loves to be able to share her passion with others and make them smile.

The swimsuit portion was won by Faith Stanfield.

"It was an empowering experience, walking across that stage in my swimsuit, which inspired courage and allowed me to express myself," Stanfield said.

Miss Congeniality, the contestant who is voted most friendly by the other contestants, was won by Ragan Aple.

"I feel honored, and I was so happy that the girls saw me as a friend who deserved the award," Aple said.

Road To
Miss Louisiana

The road to Miss Louisiana is curvy, but nothing six NSU women can't handle. The Miss Louisiana pageant in June consisted of 35 women, six representing NSU.

Stephanie Averitt of Simpson, Miss Holiday in Dixie; Holli' Conway of Monroe, Miss Taste of the Twin Cities; Lincoln Pearce of Florien, Miss Cane River; Hannah Teutsch of Haughton, Miss Louisiana Bayou; Tori Thompson of Humble, Texas, Miss Louisiana Jazzland; and Taylor Walker of Greenwood, Miss Northwestern-Lady of the Bracelet, all competed for the title of Miss Louisiana.

Conway, a senior theatre major, won third runner-up in the pageant, and also walked away with the Women in Performing Arts Scholarship and a bronze medal in the Duke of Edingburg program, a charity program that helps young people aged 14-24 to fulfill their potential and have a bright future.

"Third runner up is the farthest that NSU has ever come and that is such a humbling thing to think about," Conway said. "My accomplishments aren't just for me, they are for everything and everyone that I represent; I couldn't be happier that NSU is in that group."

Senior accounting major and contestant Lincoln Pierce, who received the Women in Education award, described the preparation for Miss Louisiana in one word: strenuous. Pierce said picking outfits for each round, practicing her talent, the piano, 3-7 times a week, eating healthy and staying up to date on current events for the interview is just the start of what goes into preparing for the pageant.

So what's Miss Louisiana worth if you don't place? Stephanie Averitt, who earned a radiologic degree in May, says competing in Miss Louisiana was one of the most rewarding experiences, even if she didn't place in the Top 10.

"I still think that all the effort was worth it," Averitt said. "Even though it wasn't in the cards to be Miss Louisiana, there are so many other life lessons that came from the Miss Louisiana Organization that couldn't just be taught, but had to be experienced. Along with dedication, a positive body image and responsibility, I had the opportunity to meet 34 successful women from across the state who all embody what it means to be Miss Louisiana."

Although Averitt didn't place in the Top 10, she didn't leave empty handed. Averitt won the swimsuit preliminary competition, as well as the Children's Miracle Network Hospitals Miracle Maker Award, for raising more than $9,000. Averitt also won the STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics) Scholarship, which is based off of major, GPA and resumes.

While none won the title of Miss Louisiana, all say they won experience, new friendships and confidence. Although the road to Miss Louisiana may be curvy, the lessons learned along the way made the trip worth it for these contestants.

Say Yes to the Dress

It was a day of surprises when Nikki Caeser stepped into Bridals by Lori in Atlanta, Ga., last August to pick out her wedding dress. "One word describes it," Caeser said in a telephone interview. "Fantastic!"

Caeser, a NSU alumna, will marry Reuben Small in Destin, Fla., May 21.

"I wanted help picking out my wedding dress," Caeser said. So she submitted an online application for "Say Yes to the Dress: Atlanta," a production of the TLC network.

An online description of the show says "...the series takes 'Say Yes to the Dress' franchise to one of the largest and busiest bridal salons in the South, Bridals by Lori...it's part bridal story, part fashion makeover and part family therapy session."

On Friday nights at 8 p.m. on TLC, brides try on several dresses, usually with an entourage of friends and family, with the goal of getting "jacked up" with veils, trains and jewelry to compliment the wedding gown they choose.

Ceaser was one of those brides Friday, Jan. 8. Caeser and her entourage, that included her sister Iris Burrell and friends Gineyle and Tisa Leggett and Kyshia Coleman, were featured in a segment that had Caeser trying on eight or nine dresses.

"There were tons of expensive dresses there. It was a completely different scale than in a small town I'm used to. Most of the gowns looked hideous," she said of the ones her entourage selected.

"They looked like my grandmother's table cloth."

Her final selection included the sparkles and bling she wanted, making for an emotional moment when consultant Monte "jacked her up" by adding the veil and jewelry. "I was in complete shock!"

Although Caeser wouldn't disclose the name of a celebrity who visited the salon while she was there, it was one of her celebrity idols who happened to be a friend of owner Lori Allen. "I had no idea she would show up. They surprised me and I just screamed when she walked in!"

Caeser ended up choosing a dress just like the one her celebrity idol wore at her wedding.

Caeser was also excited that the show highlighted Natchitoches. Caeser went to school in Natchitoches and graduated from Northwestern State in 2007. She is a graduate advisor at Northwood University in Cedar Hill, Texas, and is seeking a doctorate in education management and leadership. Caeser's parents are Roy and Belle Caeser of Natchitoches.

Her fiancé, Reuben, is the son of Gloria and Reuben Small of Natchitoches. He received a degree in business from NSU and is a data technician for DSS Research in Fort Worth. The couple have a daughter, Madison Small.

Caeser sums up the experience as having exceeded expectations and being a very happy one.

"I'd recommend to anyone they go to Lori's. It's a complete and one-of-a-kind experience."

From Louisiana To London

While most students were gearing up for a lazy and relaxing summer, Megan Boyanton, a junior liberal arts major, was packing for an eight-week internship at PinkNews, Europe's largest LGBT news source, in London. Boyanton was given the opportunity to write over 60 articles on social issues involving the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender communities. Boyanton was also able to interview many politicians and comedians, and given special access to Parliament and The British Broadcasting Cooperation (BBC). "I now know much more about British politics than the regular university student in Louisiana," Boyanton said jokingly.

While abroad, Boyanton encountered many unexpected cultural differences. For example, tips for meals and services are included in the bill and graffiti art is embraced in the younger areas, creating beautiful results. The most interesting aspect of Boyanton's experience is the introspection gained by going abroad. "It lets you see not only what the world is like, but how the world looks at your country and people," she said. "Americans are kind of looked at as the lovable, but sometimes rude and loud frat guys at the party," Boyanton said when asked about the typical British response to Americans. "Our accents are incredibly noticeable," she observes, "no matter what region of America you are from."

Boyanton highly encourages any student who has a chance to visit another country to take that opportunity, even though it does have its own challenges. "You get put into situations that you have to handle by yourself and sometimes it can get really lonely, especially if you're used to family time or a tight-knit group of friends," Boyanton said. "It really lets you get to know yourself and recognize what you're capable of. You learn so much while you're abroad without trying. It's definitely for the adventurous, the intellectual and the independent."

Where In The World Is Drew Crawford?

Senior Drew Crawford crossed the Atlantic to spend an entire semester abroad at the Johannes Kepler Universität in Linz, Austria, through the International Student Exchange Program. "I have wanted to study abroad ever since high school," Crawford said. "One of the reasons I came to NSU was because I knew there were opportunities available for international study."

Crawford was able to meet people from all over the globe, and share unforgettable experiences with them. "The best experience I had in Austria was traveling to a small town called Gmunden with my roommate from Croatia, two friends from Czech Republic, and a friend from Hungary," Crawford recalled. "We all went climbing up to the top of a mountain at 1,666 meters. There were mountains all around us and in between was a beautiful lake. This was so memorable because it was the best view I have ever seen in my life. After climbing down, we hiked along the lake as the sun was setting and I remember thinking how happy I was for deciding to study abroad."

To students considering studying abroad, Crawford said, "If you have the slightest desire to travel or spend time outside the country, then please don't pass up the opportunity you have here at NSU to study abroad!" By studying abroad through the International Student Exchange Program, Crawford was able to use all of his Northwestern State University academic and other scholarships, along with TOPS scholarships to pay for most of his expenses. "My advice for students planning to study abroad is be prepared to get out of your comfort zone," Crawford advised. "Try new things, eat new food, meet new people and it will be one of the most rewarding experiences of your life."

Demon Fest

Each year, KNWD hosts an annual music/arts festival featuring good vibes and a great atmosphere for the students of NSU and the Natchitoches community. Demon Fest can also be categorized as the Northwestern version of Voodoo Fest, Bonnaroo and Lollapalooza.

In 2011, Demon Fest started as a small music festival featuring local artists and a few food vendors, but as they approach the fourth year of the festival, it has become an annual campus event that brings students together for food, art and most importantly – music.

"We want students to relax and have a good time listening to great music not worrying about school or work," Student Media Coordinator, Daniel Thiels said. "It's almost a tailgate type environment with food vendors, music and fun."

The third annual Demon Fest took place last March on the Iberville field. Students and the Natchitoches community enjoyed a complete day of music, entertainment, art vendors and food vendors. Two stages were set up across from each other featuring bands and performers such as Apryl Jenkins, Half-Mass Mustache, Kopacetic, Carley 5K, T-Funk, Brdfrd, The Bristol Hills, Dubonauts, Passing a Starfighter, Beauski, Canebreakers, Engine, Stoop Kids, the Electric Sons and headliner Stoplight Observations.

For a festival such as Demon Fest, it usually takes about six to nine months to plan. When choosing artists for this event the KNWD staff usually goes through a list of bands within the budget and tries to keep the students in mind. Because Northwestern is such a diverse school, the staff gathers artists from each genre.

"We want students to relax and have a good time listening to great music not worrying about school or work."

Unite to Figh

The purpose of Unite to Fight is to raise both awareness and money for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. Senior Megan Duhon , who has been a part of the Unite to Fight Executive Board at Northwestern for three years says, "We work to bring NSU students together to fight for a common cause. Childhood cancer is the second leading cause of childhood death. At St. Jude, no child is ever denied treatment based on their ability to pay. The hospital also does extensive research and makes all of its findings public so health professionals who treat children everywhere can benefit. The daily cost of operating St. Jude is $1.8 million. Since coming to NSU's campus, the students have come together and raised over $100,000 for St. Jude," Duhon said.

Unite to Fight is a letter writing campaign. Students fill out pre-made letters and send them to family and friends. The letters simply ask the recipients to donate to St. Jude and provide a small form and return envelope to use if the recipient chooses to donate. For the past six years, Unite to Fight has hosted a one-night, large event where students come and fill out letters. The event also provides food, games and entertainment. There's also a competitive aspect to the event. Students can join together to create teams and participate in competitions. In the past UTF has hosted banner-painting competitions, costume competitions, can tab competitions and table decorating competitions.

To really see where all of her hard work goes, Duhon and the rest of the Unite to Fight Executive Board had the opportunity to visit one of the hospitals. "Visiting St. Jude is an indescribable feeling. We weren't allowed to individually meet the patients, but the patients were everywhere," Katelon Ramos, logistic chairman of the UTF Executive Board, said. "It's heartbreaking to see someone so young fighting to have the life they deserve." Ramos said.

Despite everything, the hospital is magical. Duhon added, "Everything about the hospital is designed to put the children at ease. The walls of the hospital are covered in murals and even the light fixtures and ceiling are designed to look like the sky. The doctors and nurses are beaming with joy and constantly smiling and making the kids laugh. Knowing that we have students who fight for St. Jude and raise awareness and money to keep St. Jude alive is the most heartwarming thing. It personally makes me proud to be a Demon."

Student Volunteers

Volunteering is big on Northwestern's campus and starting in 2015, Northwestern adopted a service project called 1 of 7. 1 of 7 was created by Kip Patrick, an NSU alum, who travels the world with his wife and dedicates one day of the week to some type of service for others. Reatha Cox, director of First Year Experience and Leadership Development, started this project at NSU for first year students and the President's Leadership Program. "I introduced the program here on campus to give the students an opportunity to do service." said Cox. "This prepares students for a lifetime of service. This program helps students get closer with the NSU campus and also the Natchitoches community."

Although 1 of 7 was started with the first year students, it began spreading throughout campus. Now many organizations and students from every class are participating in this service project. As part of Demon Days, over 170 students went to Hope for Paws, St. Augustine Church, Cane River Food Pantry and Natchitoches river banks as a service event for 1 of 7. Megan Maley, sophomore secondary education major, volunteered at the riverbank cleaning flowerbeds. "Being from Natchitoches, I took advantage of how beautiful our riverbank actually is." Maley said. "Doing this work of service gave me a new appreciation for my hometown and the people who work to make it beautiful."

The Natchitoches community has embraced Northwestern students and their passion for service. There are many people in the Natchitoches area who are looking for people to help them. 1 of 7 can be an individual act of service done by one person based on what they believe service should be or it can be a group of people volunteering in an event planned for 1 of 7. Leighann Westfall, junior hospitality, management and tourism major, describes this service project as, "a way to live out your values from your home life and continue them here in Natchitoches."

Participating in 1 of 7 can help you get involved on campus, meet many new people and allow you to help people in need. So why not take one day out of the seven days of the week and do a good work of service and change the world you live in?

Dating in College

A satirical guide to playing the field

Dating in college requires advanced detective skills these days. Singles must be sleuths, adept at deciphering the code that is the ambiguous and sub-text-laden communication of young adults. The required list of detective skills includes: gathering subtle (almost invisible) hints, deciphering texts messages down to the punctuation and frequency of response and the ability to detect "bull crap" from a mile away.

The detective must also remain incognito. To solve a mystery, you have to be a mystery yourself, answering text messages with "k" and hiding under the façade of "too cool to care." You must be like Tom Cruise in every movie he's ever been in, all nonchalance with a suave haircut. There is only one rule in the game of dating: whoever cares less, wins. In this step-by-step guide, you will learn how to be the person who always cares less, and therefore "wins" at something that should have nothing to do with winning or losing.

The first step is realizing that the word "dating" implies some sort of interest in someone, so it is best to remain coy about it. Instead of being upfront like a normal person, ask someone if they want to "hang." Or even better, ask, "Hey, would like you to catch a glimpse of my face sometime?" Showing anything other than total apathy for human connection is dating suicide. Second, never reveal your true intentions and never label the relationship, no matter the duration of your "thing." You want to string them along for as long as possible because you never know when you'll need a confidence boost. If they seem concerned about your intentions, accuse them of being "too intense" and "acting crazy." This will cause them to question themselves, and therefore will give you more time to avoid confrontation.

Third, leave everything open-ended. Telling someone you're not interested in a future relationship is just not necessary. I would suggest a technique called "ghosting," which is achieved by suddenly ceasing all communication with the person you wish to break things off with. Your actions are justified because, if you followed rule #2, you were never officially dating. You don't have to be honest or treat someone with respect unless you have a real relationship.

Lastly, assert your power by introducing yourself to your "ghosting" victims as if you've never met before. This will help you avoid awkward situations in the future by persuading the victim that the relationship was entirely made up in his or her head and you actually have no idea what's going on.

It isn't required, but sometimes a fun little game of hot and cold works wonders to display your dominance. Shower your minion with adoration and compliments for a few days, and then suddenly tell them you just "aren't feeling it." Hopefully, this will result in the weakling groveling for your affection, thus making you feel really special.

Remember, never reveal your authentic self. Treat your insignificant others like they are Harry Potter and you are Voldemort, and they must find and destroy all of your horcruxes to figure out what's going on. You are the only person who matters, and it is imperative that your behavior reflects that.

Part 2: Breaking Up—Do you believe in life after love?

The process of a breakup is the sad trek from the cuddly cocoon of "Netflix and chill" you once shared with your significant other to the cocoon that is called the "burrito of sadness," accomplished by laying in a pile of blankets in the fetus position. The words "Netflix and chill," seems dirty now and makes you feel sick to your stomach, reminding you of all of the lies and all of those pizza rolls you shared while binge-watching your favorite TV shows together, hours and pizza rolls that you will never get back. "Breaking Bad just reminds me of breaking up," you say. "Pizza rolls taste like scorn and betrayal."

Eventually, you will emerge from your burrito of sadness and transform into a beautiful and independent butterfly who don't need no man (or woman). However, your metamorphosis is dependent on the famous words of Cher: "Do you believe in life after love?"

The first step to believing in life after love is letting yourself feel your pain. Fetch a box of Kleenex and a paper and pen because it's time for the waterworks and venting out your feelings. Movies about teens with angst have taught us that the true purpose of a journal is to record misery and petty jealousies. This concept still applies to young adults. Here is an example to help you get started:

> Dear Diary,
> My heart is in millions and millions of pieces. These are not lyrics from a T-Swift song.
> It is from my freaking soul.

Get it all out, sad teen. Get it all out.

Also, don't forget to grab your favorite comfort food with your box of Kleenex. Decide whether you need a sweet or savory snack to satisfy the void in your heart. Do you prefer to drown your sorrows in melted cheese or to numb your pain with Ben & Jerry's ice cream?

When in the depths of despair and ice cream isn't enough, it's vital that you call your mom (or any other paternal figure) and incoherently sob-speak for a minimum of 60 minutes. Your mom will tell you how amazing you are and you will say, "You're just saying that because you're my mom." Despite your pessimistic response, this conversation still helps.

Taking sadness naps and causing your Facebook friends to feel secondhand embarrassment by your statuses that read more like desperate cries for help aren't the only ways to alleviate heartache. The key word here is catharsis. Purging your emotions will prevent you from becoming a bitter old person who finds fault with everything in the world and everyone in it. My personal favorite cathartic action is scream-singing "Mr. Brightside" by the Killers, a song that hasn't failed me since the seventh grade when a boy broke up with me through a vague and business-like text message.

Emotions are exhausting and sometimes distraction is the only way to boost morale in these times of hardship. Spend time hanging out with friends laughing about how ugly babies are, and then laugh about how you are a heartless person who thinks babies are ugly. Watch reality TV and feel proud of yourself for being more mature than all of the Real Housewives combined. Delve into new hobbies like underwater basket weaving or the art of Photoshop, which you can use to replace your ex's face with Channing Tatum's or Scarlett Johansson's. Now you seem like a super chill celebrity because your ex is rich and famous, but you're just too busy weaving baskets for a relationship right now.

Chief Caddo is home

Northwestern State's football season ended with the win of the biggest trophy in sports: Chief Caddo, a 7-foot tall wooden statue weighing 320 pounds.

Every year, the Demons end their season in a game against Stephen F. Austin. It's a battle of rivaling brothers, as the teams' hometowns, Natchitoches and Nacogdoches, go head to head in a game that feels very personal for both sides.

This year was the 50th Chief Caddo battle, and the NSU Demons beat their rivals with a 33-17 victory at Turpin Stadium.

Senior defensive end Leroy Armstrong raced 18 yards after snatching an interception, leading the Demons to a 17-point burst over 2:17 in the middle of the second quarter. Senior running back Daniel Taylor sealed the team's victory with a 45-yard touchdown.

"I joined the NSU football team last July, so I quickly had to learn the history of the chief," NSU Demons long snapper junior Ryan Woehlest said. "It felt great that the fourth and fifth year seniors were able to lift that chief up with their teammates and family one last time in Turpin Stadium."

The Demons turned their 0-5 start to the season around, winning four of their last six games, finishing 4-5 in the Southland Conference and 4-7 overall.

"Most teams, 0-5 at that point, would have packed it in, gone through the motions. These guys never did, not one day, not one practice, not one game," said head coach Jay Thomas. "They fuss and fight like family members do, but when it comes down to it, they are all together and they're all for each other."

Practicing 20 hours a week, four hours a day, it's no wonder that the Demons act like a family. And each year, the Demons have to say goodbye to some of their members and welcome new ones in.

"One of the biggest challenges we faced this year was rebuilding after losing a skilled group of seniors from the 2014 season," Woehlest said.

Men's Basketball

A dynamic duo

With a philosophy that the most valuable player is the team, it is no surprise that the NSU Demon basketball team had a wonderful 2014-2015 season. Scoring an average of 84 points per game, 16 assists per game and finishing the season with a record of 19-13, is a good indicator that the Demons gave the season their all, not including their invitation to participate in one of the four prestigious post-season tournaments, the College Insider Tournament. Giving each player an opportunity to play created a team that operated more like an ensemble in which all players understood each other and had good chemistry. No two players understood this so-called "court chemistry" better than Jalan West, junior, and Zeek Woodley, sophomore.

The duo, nicknamed "J-Z on Tour," led the nation as the best scoring duo in college basketball. Each individual's success depended on the others. Woodley's success as a top scoring college basketball player (averaging 22 points per game) depends on the talent of West as a point guard (averaging 7.7 assists per game). While the court chemistry of the duo seemed almost magical, their success came from their friendship. "My senior year, Jalan came to one of my high school games and told me we were going to be a good team. My freshman year, he took me under his wing, became my mentor. I got used to the way he set things up for me to score," said Woodley. West commented that Woodley is like a younger brother to him. "I think he has the potential to be one of the best players to ever come to NSU. He shoots the ball much better than I thought when I first watched him. I thought he was just an athletic point guard, but he is much more than that. I just tried to embrace him the way the guys embraced me when I came here; it's easier that way. You just want to make everyone comfortable."

West and Woodley both believe that basketball is part of the plan for their lives. "I saw it on TV and liked, and began playing when I was 3 years old. Ever since I was little I just wanted to play basketball, and that has never changed. I don't like any other sports. I just like basketball," said Woodley. "I think it was all in God's plan for me to come to NSU. Coming out of high school, there were a lot of schools looking at me, but my ACT didn't match my GPA. Most of those schools backed off, but Northwestern stayed around. I felt like I owed it to them for believing in me when nobody else did. It all worked out because now I do well in the classroom, and even better on the floor.

Tony Dobbinson sank a 3-pointer.

Jalan West got ready to shoot a 3-pointer in a home game.

I plan to keep playing basketball, and when I'm done, I would like to coach somewhere," said West.

As for the coaching staff for the NSU Basketball team, West has only good things to say. "Coach Mike is like a father figure to us. He doesn't just teach us about basketball, he teaches us about life. He tries to make us good men."

With a team dynamic unlike any other, and a coaching staff that offers more than just basketball training, students and fans of the Demon basketball team can expect great things in the future.

Women's Basketball

Second-time Southland Champions

The 2014-15 basketball season was a roaring success for the Lady Demons. The team ended the season as second-time southland champions with an average of 60.7 points per game and a scoring margin of -0.9.

The team, which is led by co-head coaches Brooke and Scott Stoehr, welcomed three signees: Cheyenne Brown, Gabryel Jackson and Emerald Mayfield.

Returning players Janelle Perez and Keisha Lee were named to the pre-season All-Southland conference women's basketball teams.

Ranked among the top 30 Southland players in steals (17th, 1.6 per game) and points per game (27th) was Lee. Lee led the Lady Demons with a career-high, tying five assists against just one turnover in a win at New Orleans.

"Playing four games in four days was hard work and very exhausting but we just had to work together as a team and keep going. It felt so great for all of our hard work to pay off and getting to share that moment with my team was pretty amazing" Lee said.

Leading NSU in scoring 18 times was Perez. At just 5'2, Perez ended the 2014-15 season as the nation's 26th most accurate free-throw shooter (81.2 percent) and the 184th-highest active shooter (1,172).

"At the beginning things were tough" Perez said. "For a while we went through a losing streak, but we didn't give up and ended up coming out stronger. We have such a great team. We're like one big family and all the hard work has brought us so close. That's the beauty of basketball."

Volleyball

Success on the court and in the classroom

Northwestern State Universitys women's volleyball team performs well and always entertains the crowd. The 2015 season proved to be a tough one, but the team did not disappoint outside of Prather.

Lauren Agan, Natalie Jaeger and Bailey Martin were all three of which are a part of the junior class at NSU and all named to the 18-member list announced by the conference. This accomplishment proved to be one of the highest honors, considering that there were only four other schools in the Southland with players named to the list.

"I am very proud of Bailey, Lauren and Natalie – what great examples of student-athletes," first-year head coach Sean Kiracofe said. "They have put a lot of work into excelling in the classroom and, at the same time, are the first to ask for extra work on the court. The three of them are roommates in what is apparently an incubator of academic success. We need to go out and find a bigger house so we can move some underclassmen in with them. We are lucky to have them as role models for our incoming freshmen."

The selections mark the third straight year in which Northwestern State has placed three players on the conference's all-academic team. Agan boasted a very impressive 3.92 GPA that proves that even though you are a NCAA athlete, you can still perform academically. Agan has the third highest GPA in the First team All-Academic Team.

One of the most impressive feats is that junior Jaeger is also a member of the Louisiana Scholars' College that holds students to standards that prove tough for an already busy athlete.

Amidst all of the success academically, the Demons fought a very tough season with a 7-22 record, just short of making the Southland Conference Tournament. The entire team is looking forward to making the tournament next year under their head coach of only a year.

The NSU Demon volleyball team epitomizes focus both on and off the court and with a little hard work and dedication, anything is possible.

Baseball

Second in Southland Conference

The 2015 Demon baseball team had a very successful season. Under head coach Lane Burroughs, the Demons finished 31-23 overall, including going 20-8 in conference play, good enough for second in the Southland Conference. Demon baseball also established a legitimate home-field advantage, going an impressive 17-7 at Brown-Stroud Field. This season also saw the Demons travel almost an even 1,000 miles to South Bend, Indiana, and take 2 out of 3 games from D-1 opponent Notre Dame.

In addition to team effort, several Demon baseball players also had outstanding individual seasons. Junior outfielder/catcher Cort Brinson had a career year, leading the Demons in the Triple Crown categories, batting .350 with nine home runs and 42 RBI. Brinson, the Southland Conference's Hitter of the Year and a first Team All-Louisiana pick, highlighted his junior year campaign with a school-record 29. game hitting streak from mid-March all the way until May 10. The streak was the longest in the nation at the time of its' completion. Complementing Brinson for much of the season was senior infielder Chase Daughdrill. Second to Brinson in the Demons' Triple Crown categories, Daughdrill batted .324 with 30 RBI, while slugging at an impressive .476 clip. He also led the team with a .417 on-base percentage while starting all 54 games.

On the pitching side of things, Demon fans might have thought they were seeing double sometimes, as brothers Adam and Josh Oller took the mound on consecutive nights during weekend series. Adam also led the Demon pitching staff in innings pitched (108.1), opponents' batting average against (.208), and complete games (5). Josh Oller was equally effective, as the freshman compiled a very impressive 10-2 record. The 10 wins on the season led the Demons. He also struck out 57 batters, which tied him for first on the team with, incidentally, brother Adam.

With a successful season under their belt and a majority of starters returning, as well as a talented crop of underclassmen, there is much to look forward to for NSU baseball.

Softball

Nothing short of dominance

The 2015 Lady Demon softball team had a season that was nothing short of dominance, as the ladies went an imposing 36-18 overall. They also dictated the Southland Conference, posting a 22-3 mark in conference play; the Lady Demons did not lose a conference series the entire year on the way to a regular season conference championship, their first since 2000.

Winning the conference title allowed Southland Conference Coach of the Year Donald Pickett and the Lady Demons to host the annual conference tournament, where the girls were runners-up. Pickett has led the Lady Demons to three straight 30-win seasons.

After helping NSU capture the conference championship in the spring, Lady Demon standouts Kellye Kincannon, Cassandra Barefield, Mikayla Brown and Brittney Jones were selected to the 2015 All-Louisiana Collegiate Softball Team. Kincannon was a first-team pick, while Barefield, Brown, and Jones all got second-team nods. All four were All-Southland Conference selections who very nearly led NSU to its third consecutive NCAA Tournament appearance. Kincannon and Brown were also on the All-South Region Team.

Kincannon, right fielder, broke NSU's single-season record for RBI (60), runs (48), and slugging percentage (.789) while posting the third best batting average (.409) in school history. She ended the season on a 21-game on base streak and her 15 home runs were the fourth most ever in a single season for the Lady Demons.

A three-time All-Southland Conference selection, senior Cassandra Barefield broke Lady Demon career home run and slugging percentage records while compiling season stats of .319 batting average, 17 home runs, and 52 RBI. Her 53 career dingers shattered the former record by 15, and her career .632 slugging percentage was 47 points higher than the old mark.

Freshman newcomer Mikayla Brown finished the season third in the state Pitcher of the Year voting and second in Freshman of the Year voting. She finished with a 13-4 record with a 1.56 ERA in 29 appearances, also securing two saves for NSU. Brown held opposing hitters to a less-than-enviable .206 average and she struck out 64 in 98 and 2/3 innings pitched.

With the mix of raw young talent and experienced leadership on the team, Coach Pickett has to like his chances of eclipsing the 30-win mark once again and continuing to be the team to beat in the Southland Conference.

Women's Cross Country

Flashback from last season

The Lady Demons had a flashback from last season since the same five runners returned. Cross country competed in six meets this season concluding with the Southland Conference Championships in Huntsville, Texas.

The first meet of the season, the Stephen F. Austin Dual Meet was a success for both the men and women cross country teams. Sophomore Jacqueline Rushford led the Lady Demons with a fourth-place finish, completing her 3,200 meter run in 12:14.80. Other NSU female runners included Erin Wrozek (7th, 12:24.70), Erin Sitarz (9th, 12:54.75) Emily Sitarz (12th, 13:27.37) and Kaitlyn Tunks (15th, 14:52.55).

The Lady Demons continued to improve during their next meet, the Southland Conference Preview Meet. The third meet of the season, the Louisiana Tech Mook 5, saw the women's team reign supreme as Jacqueline Rushford won the 3-mile women's race by nearly a minute in the 42-runner field. She clocked an 18:43. NSU produced three of the top six finishers with sophomores Erin Wrozek (19:48) Erin Sitarz (20:08) and Emily Sitarz (20:26) finishing fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively.

CROSS COUNTRY

Men's Cross Country

Training for success

The season started out a little oddly for Demon cross country runners, as second year head coach Nathanial McReynolds increased the number of male competitors from eight last season all the way up to 15. Cross-country competed in six meets this season, concluding with the Southland Conference Championships in Huntsville, Texas.

The first meet of the season, the Stephen F. Austin Dual Meet, was a booming success for NSU as sophomore Joshua Wilkins won the individual title, finishing his 5K in 16:10.21. Grant Butts (10th, 17:13.85), Hunter Wamack (11th, 17:21.67), Lucas Moncla (12th, 17:25.40) and Dylan Dunford (13th, 17:36.33) all also scored behind Wilkins.

The team continued to make strides over the final two regular season meets (McNeese State Meet and the Ragin Cajun Invitational), the latter of which saw senior Jeremy Elliot secure a third place finish with a time of 27:53 in the 5 mile race.

At the Southland Conference Championships, young runners had a tough day but a learning experience that will be very helpful in the future. The men finished 11th in the 12-team event.

Sophomore Josh Wilkins finished 26th with a time of 26:06 to lead the Demons in the 8K race. The top-30 finish is Wilkins' second of his college career after placing 22nd as a freshman. With only one runner gone for the next season (Jeremy Elliot), the Demons will return with plenty of valuable experience for the next year.

Soccer

Hard work pays off

The 2015 Lady Demon soccer team posted a 5-10-4 mark; that included a 2-5-3 record in Southland Conference play. Though the Demons' season ended with a loss, the 2015 squad did make a mark on the NSU record books. The Lady Demons scored 33 goals on the season, which is tied for ninth-best in the program's 20 year history. The 29 goals allowed was the best since 2009, and the +4 goal differential is the first positive number since that 2009 season. The Demons averaged 16 shots on goal and 1.74 goals scored a game. They also cashed in both penalty kick opportunities they were afforded during the season.

Esdeina Gonzalez led the Lady Demons with 6 goals scored on 42 shots on goal, and also had three different game-winning goals. Cassandra Briscoe was second with 5 goals; she also led the Lady Demons 43 shots on goal and 5 assists. On the defensive side, goalie Alex Latham allowed only 18 goals on 180 shots for the season, with an impressive 73 saves. She also posted two shutouts.

Two NSU soccer players were recognized for their efforts this season, as senior Cassandra Briscoe and sophomore Esdeina Gonzalez were named to the All-Southland Conference second team. With all but 7 of the 31 person team returning for next season, the NSU Lady Demon soccer team will be back next year with a vengeance.

Tennis

The Lady Demon tennis team crushed their spring 2015 conference season like it was nobody's business.

The team attended the NCAA tournament for the third time in six years, an accomplishment none of the 13 other teams from the Southland Conference can boast.

The Lady Demons ranked ninth in the Oracle/ITA Southern Region.

"To be considered one of the top 10 teams in the region, alongside five Southeastern Conference teams, is a very impressive accomplishment," NSU Sports Information Director Doug Ireland said.

Players Tatiana Larina and Natalya Krutova finished the tournament with a No. 77 national ITA ranking and a No. 8 Southern Region ITA ranking.

"It's very exciting to see our team recognized with a regional ranking, and to see our doubles team in the regional and national rankings," head coach Olga Bazhanova said. "These rankings are secondary behind championships, and result from a year-long commitment of training and teamwork by our girls."

Attending the NCAA required the Lady Demons to win the Southland Conference Tournament, the primary goal for the team every year. This year, they hope to win the Southland Conference again and return to the NCA tournament for the fourth time in a decade and the first year in a row.

"Tatiana and Natalie worked very hard during the season and I am very proud of the way they have competed," said Bazhanova. "They have set high standards for the younger girls on the team."

The newcomers on the team have a lot to live up to this year, but with a good fall 2015 season, they are looking forward to the spring competition season.

Track & Field

Leaps and bounds ahead of the competition

The Northwestern State University Track and Field team had quite a successful season in the indoor and outdoor track meets. Among one of the highlights of the season was the acquisition of the newest addition to the coaching staff, Adam Pennington. Pennington, a former Northwestern State competitor has quickly developed into a well-regarded coach and recruiter on the college level.

Pennington, a USATF Level 1 certified and USTFCCCA Strength and Conditioning certified coach, will coach the men's and women's sprints, relays, hurdles, and pole vault for the NSU program, said head track and field coach Mike Heimerman.

"Adam is a very hard worker, loves to recruit and thrives on the long hours. He is very knowledgeable," said Heimerman. "He is constantly trying to educate himself in our sport and be at the forefront of teaching and coaching technique. He brings all the characteristics I was looking for when searching for a coach."

This season, the Louisiana Sports Writers Association announced Northwestern State competitors had eight marks, led by a pair of state-best performances from junior Emmanuel Williams, on the 2015 All-Louisiana Collegiate Track and Field Team.

The Northwestern State University Track and Field will continue to stay leaps and bounds ahead of the competition with their coaching staff and history of champions.

Elite athletes

The 2014-15 Lady Demon Track and Field season was a huge success. Between Por'Sha Thomas winning the indoor/outdoor triple jump and De'Shalyn Jones running the 200/400 meter double, there is no doubt that the team did a fantastic job of representing NSU.

Contenders in the 2015 Southland Indoors were Thomas and Rechelle Bessard.

NSU won 18 events at the Demon Invite Track and Field Meet. Bessard won the women's discus with one of the best throws in the nation.

"We had a very strong season," Coach Heimerman said. "There were a few injuries and such that could have been damaging to our performance, but we pulled through, did an excellent job and still managed to finish third in the championships."

Ashley Aldredge, who suffered a career-threatening injury, pulled through and went to the NCAA Outdoor championships in women's javelin. She was the Voter's Choice to win the 2014-15 "Demon Delights" contest.

"The season started out a little rough because I wasn't where I wanted to be and I knew I could do a lot better, but I used that as motivation to do better" said Ashley Aldredge. "All the hard work paid off. It felt so awesome winning conference and going to nationals."

Graduating were two big contributors to the team, Keona Jackson and Jessica Talley. Their experience and leadership helped bring the team much success.

"The most memorable moment of the season was going to indoor conference and seeing all the elite athletes in one building" said Jones. "I love track because it's both an individual and team sport. You really do get out of it what you put in."

Athlete Spotlight:
Caiti O'Connell

For NSU senior Caiti O'Connell, dreams include a spot as captain for the NSU Women's Volleyball team, an active involvement with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes organization and exiting college with a biology degree and a secured internship at Disneyland in Orlando.

O'Connell always brings positivity and a great message wherever she goes. "She is such a strong Christian that inspires me daily to become a better person," said NSU freshman volleyball player Abby Gardea. As a fifth year senior on the volleyball team, O'Connell brings the mentality necessary to take her team to the next level. Not only does O'Connell bring strong leadership to the volleyball team, but remains a great influence throughout campus.

Someone who always goes above and beyond what is asked of her, "Caiti is an outstanding leader in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, she is always looking out for people and very dependable," said FCA coordinator and NSU counselor Christie Price. But O'Connell's leadership roles will not stop after she leaves NSU's campus, as she will take them to Orlando where she is interning at Disney World.

"This internship is something I have been dreaming and praying about for a very long time and actually getting the opportunity to go and do it is very exciting," said O'Connell. She also recognizes that many people at NSU had her back making the entire situation more exciting and less intimidating. "That's one of the biggest things I have gained here at NSU. I was able to accomplish all these things with help from all the amazing people I've met along the way," O'Connell said.

O'Connell truly found her passion and made it grow into something larger and something greater than herself that will be a constant reminder of how NSU impacted her life.

Pardon Our Progress

Communication makes a split from English and Language

Students who journey up the infamous Kyser stairway to the third floor will find it lacking the Communications Department. The Department isn't gone; it only relocated to the second floor of the building, to room 239. The location of the department is not the only thing that's changed.

Over the summer, the department not only separated from the English Department, it conjoined with the Department of Creative and Performing Arts as the Department of New Media, Journalism and Communication Arts.

The decision was a strategic move allowing the Department of English and Foreign Language, and the Department of New Media, Journalism and Communication Arts to expand on their programs available to students, said Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences Dr. Steve Horton. The changes to the department will not affect students, or their ability to graduate, according to Dr. Paula Furr, the department head However, the department reevaluated the current curriculum, allowing it to reflect the fields in which their students plan to work said.

"The reasons for expanding the departments were to allow them to grow and expand. Before the split, the departments were so large that they could only focus on daily functions," said Horton. The evaluation of the degree programs showed that only one-fourth of the students were in general communications and three-fourths of the students were Mass Communications, so the department was not able to "focus on career development and basic needs of the department."

Since the department's split, the new department has already added to its faculty with the addition of Instructor Dorian "Elaine" Eaton and Student Media Coordinator Daniel Thiels. Student Media Coordinator is a position that was created this year to allow one person to focus on counseling students on student media. In this position, Thiels is responsible for budgeting and advising for 91.7 KNWD, The Current Sauce and Potpourri. He also hopes to eventually bring these media into the modern age of journalism by creating an electronic version of the student newspaper that students can download, adding Quick Response (QR) codes to Potpourri which will allow students to access additional content not in the yearbook, and eventually getting student broadcasts from KNWD to play on stations in other areas as a way for satellite campuses and potential students to hear the news from NSU.

NSU Majors

World-class education

Offering over 68 majors ranging in areas from business, theatre, science and anything in between, NSU is thriving. Attending Northwestern State offers a variety of departments for students to choose from.

"Attending college at NSU has helped shape me since high school," Micah Arbuckle, senior business administration major, said. "With the help that the Business Department has provided me, I can proudly say that I will graduate - on time."

Northwestern offers a variety of free tutoring programs, helpful to students who want to get ahead. Kole Smith, senior math major and tutor, said tutoring has not only helped the students he tutors, but also him. "Tutoring students helps keep me motivated," Smith said. "Knowing that I'm helping someone else while also staying sharp in my field is a great feeling."

No matter what the interest of an incoming freshman, students know that more than likely, what they want to study will be offered at NSU.

College of Education & Human Development

The College of Education of Human Development strives to deliver better educators and leaders for tomorrow. NSU was created in 1884 and was known as the Louisiana Normal College. Over 130 years later and the college is still producing great educators with leadership services and effective models of teaching and learning. The College of Education and Human Development's vision is: We are Models for Learning. This vision insures each candidate will have the knowledge, skills and readiness needed to become an ideal model for learning. In addition to teacher preparation and other school personnel programs, the college offers degrees in adult education, health and exercise science, health promotions, student affairs in higher education and sports administration.

The students in the college feel it's a new era for teaching. Jessica Rousset, junior elementary education major, said "I want to make a difference in the world and by being a teacher you have so much influence on children. You can be that positive role model and inspire them to want to learn rather than make them learn. I want to make learning fun and exciting for children. The professors always have their doors open if you need help with anything and they are always willing to work with you to make sure you get everything you need," Rousset said.

Not only do the students share a common major, they share a love for education.

College of Nursing & Allied Health

The College of Nursing and Allied Health provides some of the most well trained and definitely most spirited nurses in the country. Northwestern State University admitted its first nursing students in 1949 and ever since then, has made a name for itself.

With the main campus in Shreveport, many students complete two years in Natchitoches of pre-clinical training and then head to Shreveport for the final two years of in-hospital training. Junior Courtney Pierce recently made the transition to Shreveport. "Leaving Natchitoches was hard, but worth it. Shreveport has grown on me and being here makes me one step closer to achieving my dreams," Pierce said.

The nursing college was started when a group of area hospitals came together to form a program to funnel nurses into the booming hospital scene in Shreveport. Since the early days of the program, the NSU College of Nursing and Allied Health has continued to gain national recognition by earning several awards based on graduation rates and overall performance in testing.

Nurses upon graduation are well prepared to delve straight into a career in nursing, which most of them train for months to accomplish. Most of the nurses' instructors have multiple years of experience, which only adds to the quality of the program.

Northwestern State University's nursing program is one of the best in the country and will continue to hold such a title as long as the program produces quality nurses with NSU quality skills.

College of Business & Technology

Faculty in Northwestern State University's School of Business and Technology hosted activities in conjunction with one of the largest educational events in history Dec. 10-11. Professors organized activities for NSU Elementary and NSU Middle Lab students to commemorate Hour of Code, a global movement that seeks to support computer science in schools. Sponsored by Code.org as part of National Code Week, nearly 200,000 Hour of Code events are planned around the world in the hopes of reaching tens of millions of students in more than 180 countries.

The Hour of Code is a one-hour introduction to computer science, designed to demystify code and show that anybody can learn the basics. This year's Hour of Code revolved around a Star Wars theme. Other tutorials featured Minecraft and characters from the movie "Frozen."

To introduce the youngsters to their first experience in computer coding, NSU faculty dressed as Star Wars characters and presented a video that showed how coding creates animation and special effects. Students then used blocks to drop and drag in a simple Star Wars game that allowed them to move a droid.

Russell Jenkins, a fifth grader at NSU Elementary Lab, said he didn't know much about coding before he participated in Hour of Code.

"Now I think it's awesome," he said, as he moved the droid he programmed in the Star Wars game.

Dr. Margaret Kilcoyne, interim dean of the College of Business and Technology and director of the School of Business, said hosting the students for the Hour of Code not only exposes youngsters to computer science, but also creates an opportunity for her faculty to impact the community in a positive way through outreach to schools. More then 100 students attended Thursday's events and about 160 attended Friday's sessions.

Anyone can participate in Hour of Code projects by visiting code.org, a public non-profit dedicated to expanding participation in computer science by making it available in more schools, and increasing participation by women and underrepresented students of color. The organization has numerous partners supporting the Hour of Code, including Microsoft, Apple, Amazon, Boys and Girls Clubs of America and the College Board.

College of Arts & Letters

Northwestern State University's College of Arts, Letters, Graduate Studies and Research has experienced numerous changes in the last year, including being renamed the College of Arts and Sciences. The college encompasses nine departments: Department of Biological and Physical Sciences, Department of New Media, Journalism and Communication Arts; School of Creative and Performing Arts; Department of Criminal Justice, History and Social Sciences; Department of English, Foreign Languages and Cultural Studies; Department of Mathematics; General Studies; Liberal Arts and the Graduate School.

Other changes to the college include the separation and renaming of the Department of Language and Communication and some new department heads. Dr. Jim Mischler is currently standing in as acting department head for the Department of English, Foreign Languages and Cultural Studies.

Well-qualified instructors working in each of these departments offer students a high quality education. Instructors also offer a caring environment for students to thrive in.

Carly Clark, a graduate student studying Student Affairs in Higher Education, said, "So far I have been very impressed from what the grad school has to offer based on my experiences. I am so thankful I decided to come to the school. I couldn't imagine myself going anywhere else. This is a once in a lifetime learning opportunity."

Scholars' College

Louisiana Scholar's College was established in 1987 with one goal in mind: to enable higher education for students in the program. This program has successfully given many students a well-rounded education. Cayla Mendow, senior art major, said, "I'm an art major, but I also have more to offer. I never pictured myself as a scholars' student until Dr. Davina McClain asked me to join the team," Mendow said.

Students in this program are highly involved in every aspect of college life on campus, whether it be in a Greek organization or holding a position in student government. Scholars' also has a deeper feel when it comes to the classroom. It's a home away from home to the many here at Northwestern State due to the tight bond that students and teachers share. "A place I never dreamed would exist," professor Holly Stave said. "Every student is driven and strives to be the best they can be."

Future students interested in Scholars' will need to be ready to learn and be ready to take their education to the next level.

Theatre & Dance

A Look Backstage

You may have seen a NSU Theatre and Dance production for your Fine Arts class or just for something to do with a group of friends. But do you know what happens when the curtain is closed?

The world of theatre and dance in CAPA is native to over 160 majors and minors who work together to put on five to six shows a semester. Almost 10,000 jazz squares and 500 cans of hairspray after their first day in CAPA (around four years later), graduating theatre students receive a bachelor of science in theatre with at least one concentration in either musical theatre, dance, design/technology or performance/directing. The design/technology concentration allows students to choose from costume design, scenic painting, lighting, sound and stage management.

Many students choose to take on two concentrations, the equivalent of adding a minor in credit hours. "People are typically amazed, not only by the talent, but our students' ability to do more than one thing," said Dr. Greg Handel, director of the School of Creative and Performing Arts. "That's one of the things we pride our program on."

The average day in the life of a theatre major isn't as glamorous as one would think. Students often stay at school from 9 a.m. until 11 p.m. during the week. Junior Mary Reed, a double concentrator in costume design and scenic painting described her typical day: ""I wake up and go to the 8 a.m. production meeting and then to my classes during the day. After that, I go into the costume shop for building whatever pieces we need. Then from about 6 to 10:30, I'll probably be at a rehearsal, and then I go home and do homework."

In addition to their demanding schedule, theatre students are required to get applied theatre hours for six semesters, working in various shops to learn technical skills and assist with productions in progress. "The most important thing I can teach my students is that they have the ability to go out of here with the bag of tools that they can use in any situation," said Coordinator and Director of the department Scott Burrell. "They need to leave here well-rounded and well-versed in not one, but in many approaches."

Whether students work behind the scenes or in the spotlight, they must remain passionate and self-motivated by their commitment and love for theatre. "I knew right off the bat that theatre was going to be something I was going to do for the rest of my life," said junior Nikki Lopez, a technical concentrator in stage management. "Not everyone can be a stage manager. It's something you have to be passionate about because it's hard, but absolutely worth it in the end."

Underneath the costumes and the stage makeup is the thick skin that performers must have in a field that is competitive and often times discouraging. "You can't set a mental block for yourself," said musical theatre and dance concentrator Annie Dauzat. "You're going to get told no a lot, but you can't let that stop you."

With the passion and commitment NSU theatre majors have, it doesn't look like anything can stop them.

Fine and Graphic Arts

A new look

The Department of Fine and Graphic Arts at Northwestern consists of programming, fine arts, painting, sculpting, ceramics and photography. The Fine and Graphic Arts program has been here since the 1940's starting as just fine arts. In the Mid 70's Commercial Art was added to the program and now Graphic Communication can be added to that list.

Third year professor of Graphic Design and New Media Mirla G. Enriquez tells us that this program is one designed to gear students up for life after college. "Students working in graphic design can expect to learn about animations, advertisements and more," Enriquez said. "Although I'm a professor over graphic design, the Visual Arts Department as a whole is looking to expand in all fields of art."

Students choosing to study in the fine and graphic arts department at Northwestern get a hands on experience. Every semester, two students are picked to work with the community, the university and clients to produce flyers and advertisements for their businesses. These students also receive a scholarship as well as real world experience.

Just last year, eight students graduated from the graphic design program and all eight received jobs after college. Enriquez emphasized the success of the students who graduate from this particular program. "I encourage students to prepare for jobs and expand on their education. In the Visual Arts program, you receive coverage in a plethora of fields equipping you for this ever-changing society."

Music

The Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Society

Northwestern State University offers students many opportunities to be a part of musical ensembles, whether it is choir, band or orchestra. All ensembles are equally stunning and offer students the chance to learn and grow as musicians. However, the Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Orchestra has a resource other ensembles on campus do not have: The Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Society.

Approaching its 50-year anniversary, the society has worked non-stop to raise funds for scholarships for orchestra students. Money is raised through membership drives, with the minimum amount to become a member being $50. The Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Society is currently putting away funds for an endowment to create a stable financial basis for orchestra scholarships. Nearly all students in the NSU Orchestra are on scholarship, including students who are not music majors.

This creates a unique assortment of students, all coming together to do something they love - make music. Dr. Douglas Bakenhus, music director and conductor of the orchestra, has much to say about the far-reaching benefits of participating in orchestra. "The best thing about directing the orchestra at Northwestern is the diversity you find within the orchestra. Working with art forms takes you places, and it is a combination of people working together to express something that is beyond words. You share that feeling with those you make the music with, but you also make connections to people from the past who wrote the music. Contact with music through orchestra helps students, and people in general, understand life and what it really means to be human."

New Faces

Sixty-six freshmen theatre majors made their A.A. Fredericks debut in "New Faces," an annual performance welcoming new students to the NSU Theatre and Dance department.

Every year, a group of seniors direct and choreograph a group number for the freshman class to begin the show. For the rest of the performance, each freshman has a chance to perform a solo or a duet in front of their new theatre classmates.

Each "new face" receives an upperclassmen mentor to help them prepare for the event.

"The ability to allow every student in the program to help another student just makes everybody closer and allows everybody to feel like they're apart of something," said New Faces Coordinator and Theatre Professor Dr. Vicki Parrish.

This year, the group number was a section from "A Chorus Line." The song is very coming-of-age and reflects leaving a time of naivety and innocence.

"It is very appropriate in that it vividly describes growing up and saying goodbye to each age that is gone," said senior New Faces Choreographer Josh De Alba.

Technical and musical theatre concentrator Annie Wright sang a comedic duet with freshman Shannon Jackson called "Agony" from "Into the Woods." Their animated rendition, full of exaggerated gestures and wild facial expressions made the audience roar with laughter.

Wright explained that without her coach, she wouldn't have been as confident coming into "New Faces."

"My coach has showed me the ropes of CAPA," she said. "She's funny and she's more like a big sister. It's kind of like having a theatre big."

The upperclassmen eagerly awaited every single performance, excited to hear what new talent was entering the department. Although some described the experience of performing in front of an audience of experienced performers as "intimidating," these freshmen were just excited to officially be part of the Theatre Department.

"I've enjoyed it a lot," said freshman musical theatre concentrator Lazarus Salinas. "It's been a lot of fun getting to know about what I have to look forward to with my future in the department."

Every upperclassmen theatre major has a story about their first night becoming a "real theatre major." The day of "New Faces," Instagram and Facebook feeds were filled with throwback photos of "New Faces" performances from the past few years. It's not only a right of passage, but it's the event that officially brings the freshman into the theatre family.

"New Faces is such a welcoming event," said Choreographer Josh De Alba. "Upperclassmen are so supportive and it's really a family event for our theatre family. Everyone feels phenomenal after."

Next year, those 66 freshman will be in the seats, impatiently waiting to hear the new talent and to welcome them into their close-knit theatre family.

NORTHWESTERN
STATE UNIVERSITY

History:

Leesville/Fort Polk Campus

In the 1970's, the want and need for expansion of the Natchitoches campus arose. Soon, talk began to start an "outreach" program. When Leesville/Fort Polk heard about this idea in 1974, they donated a 160-acre tract of land to Northwestern State University.

By the summer of 1976, the first classroom administration building was erected. President Arnold Kilpatrick declared that the traditional university campus, "is no longer capable of meeting the unique challenges of today," and that, "educators at Northwestern respond to the challenge to go where the people are..." From there on out, change was coming and civilians and military families both embraced this easier way to go to college without having to drive an hour or more to school.

Today, the campus has three buildings that include a student lounge, library, nursing lab, several distance learning classrooms, three computer labs, a compass testing site and a newly renovated proctoring test area for online and distance learning students.

When walking through the buildings at the Leesville campus, you see a variety of students. Looking into a classroom you might see a soldier in uniform, a high school graduate or even your friend's mother sitting in one of Dr. Briggs' Political Science classes.

The small campus tries to make every student they encounter feel welcome. Students love the one-on-one time they get with their teachers and the feeling of someone always having their backs. At the Leesville/Fort Polk campus, they strive to bring out the best in their students every day.

"The teachers are so much more understanding than a bigger class would be," stated Sarah Landry, a freshman majoring in history. "This is definitely a better choice for me with classes. It's convenient and very student oriented."

Leesville/Fort Polk Campus

On the first day of the fall semester, there was an old office cleaned up with things on the desk and shelves, a new name on the schedule of classes at the Leesville/Fort Polk campus. Who was this Mr. Banks?

What was known was that he was the new Psychology teacher/advisor on the satellite campus. What may not be known is that he was a New Orleans native but moved around to different cities, states and even spent a time in Korea, because he was a military kid. Bryan Banks said, "Traveling and living in different places gave me an appreciation for different cultures, foods, and ideas."

Banks practiced psychology in both Texas and Arkansas. He has over 20 years of field experience and specialized in marriage, family therapy and also child psychology. Before teaching at Northwestern State University, he was full-time professor at Baton Rouge Community College for four years. He was also an adjunct professor for Northwestern State University on and off the campus for several years. He is now a full-time professor at both the Leesville/Fort Polk campus and the Natchitoches campus. He has now been teaching professionally for over seven years.

Some of the classes you might see Banks teaching are Introduction Psychology, Developmental Psychology, Adjustment, Abnormal Psychology, Human Sexuality and Social Psychology. His favorite class to teach is Abnormal Psychology. He said this class is one of his favorites because through his career he worked with and treated clients with a majority of the disorders and/or issues that are taught in the class.

When asked what makes the Leesville/Fort Polk campus different to him, he answered, "I get to work with the military and their families. Also, I know the community wants access to higher learning opportunities and I want to be a part of that."

His favorite thing about being a professor and a counselor are seeing a client and/or a student progress to the next level in their lives and achieve goals that they have set. As for Banks' goals, he is looking forward to the future. He hopes that five years from now he will still be teaching at Northwestern State University as well as having a private practice in Natchitoches and Leesville.

Banks is doing what the Leesville/Fort Polk campus and the Natchitoches campus hope to do, he is making a link to both of them. He teaches in Natchitoches with classes with over 60 students and then comes down to the Leesville/Fort Polk campus to teach a small classroom of maybe 20. Just because the campus is small does not mean that they shouldn't have all of the classes they need. Banks is a great addition to the satellite campus and the students cannot wait to learn more from him.

Welcome Week

Leesville/Fort Polk Campus

It is August 24, the first day of classes. New faces are walking through the doors and following close behind are nerves. All students have had these feelings before. You are walking into a new place for the first time and have no idea what to expect. For years at the Leesville/Fort Polk campus there was nothing to help with new students and incoming freshman. This fall, that was changed.

For the first days of class, the Leesville/Fort Polk campus had a table at the front door. At this table sat student workers ready and able to help with any questions that these new students had. The questions ranged from location of classes to if they needed their textbooks, to even where everything was on the campus. The student workers hopped on any question that a student had. They even took several groups to classes.

Not only were the students able to get questions that they had answered, they were also encouraged to have some fun on the first day of classes. Sitting on the table were school spirit items such as pens, decals/stickers, lanyards, key chains and much more. The students were also able to put their names in a raffle. The prizes in the raffle were shirts, sunglasses, water bottles and even more awesome Northwestern State University items.

Students were excited for this opportunity. The students at the satellite campus enjoy receiving spirit items that allow them to show their school pride.

"It gave students the opportunity to get to know the staff and get all of their questions and directions answered," Payton Gordy, a junior in Radiologic Sciences said. "As a student worker, I got to be one-on-one with the new students and help them. I wish that when I came here the first day I would have been able to get the help that I needed."

Students are hopeful that the Welcome Week will continue. This event helped many students and helped make the first day jitters disappear, even for just a couple of minutes.

Alexandria Campus

The Northwestern State University CENLA Campus Center serves the central Louisiana area with select degree programs through the Learning Center for Rapides Parish (LCRP). The LCRP is an association of post-secondary institutions partnering to expand educational offerings in the area. The academic facility is located within England Airpark in Alexandria and easily accessible to major highways connecting the various parishes of central Louisiana.

Northwestern has been a part of the Learning Center since the early 1980's. Northwestern State University was brought to Central Louisiana to service the military and gave soldiers the opportunity to earn a degree and extended the opportunity to others. The Northwestern State University Cenla office is located on the second floor. The campus has several classrooms, a student lounge, library and a computer lab. The campus is very diverse and offers different degree programs: business administration, criminal justice, nursing, radiologic science, social work, general studies and education. The Cenla campus also offers proctoring for online and distance learning students and compass testing. Without the help of the staff and faculty, the campus would not run smoothly.

The Cenla campus provides opportunities to students all over Louisiana. There are many full-time and adjunct faculty members who spend countless hours working to provide students with the best learning opportunities possible. They believe that every student deserves an education. The faculty and staff invest much of their time and themselves into the students, giving each student the confidence to excel in their career path and to make their mark on the world.

Most people would define a good teacher as someone who helps their students excel academically and do well on their exams. They genuinely care about their students. Carolyn Hartt is that teacher.

Hartt is the coordinator for the Bachelors of Science in Nursing Program at NSU CENLA. Hartt began her education at Mississippi College in Clinton Miss., with a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. After graduation, Hartt decided to go back to school and obtain her Masters Degree in Psychiatric Mental Health Nursing at the University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg, Miss. Hartt teaches classes in the BSN and ASN programs at the CENLA campus in Alexandria. "Teaching is something that you want to do and have a passion for," Hartt said.

Hartt has been teaching for over 30 years. She stands out as a teacher who goes the extra mile for her students and strives for excellence while teaching. She is very compassionate about her students and wants them to succeed in life. Hartt said "There is no greater gift than to see someone grow in nursing."

At an early age, Hartt knew she wanted to become a nurse. "My mother was a registered nurse with 40 years of experience working with the mentally ill. When I was a little girl, my mom would get ready for work in the morning in her clean, white uniform. I wanted to be just like her and wear the white uniform with dignity and pride. My mother's purpose in life was to care for others. I admired her very much," Hartt said.

Throughout the years at NSU, Hartt has become a role model to many students. She shows her students that hard work does pay off and that they should never give up on their dreams. She is greatly loved and appreciated by the nursing students at NSU CENLA.

NORTHWESTERN STATE

History:

Shreveport Campus

Northwestern State University's Shreveport campus is not your regular satellite campus. It serves as the heart of the university's highly renowned nursing program and houses the College of Nursing and School of Allied Health.

At the beginning of the 20th century, the majority of nursing degrees were actually earned through diploma programs at local hospitals. With the increase in healthcare services and demand in the area, many healthcare facilities recognized the need for collegiate prepared nurses. According to the College of Nursing's official website, NSU rose to the occasion and enrolled their first baccalaureate nursing students in 1949, thus making it the oldest state supported nursing program in Louisiana.

Initially, NSU offered the diploma program and BSN program. Ultimately, it became more advantageous to phase out the diploma program in the late 1950s. For those who wished to obtain a BSN degree after receiving their diploma certification, NSU began to offer a RN to BSN program. Almost two decades later and after much success, the College of Nursing clinical campuses were consolidated from a wide geographical area to the Shreveport campus.

NSU's Shreveport campus is rich in both history and knowledge. According to the Caddo Parish Historical website, the iconic Line Avenue Building, located at 1800 Line Avenue, had served as the first free school in the city after receiving a grant by the City of Shreveport in 1890. Famous architect, N. S. Allen completed the school in 1905. The red brick structure boasts four classrooms per floor with a central hexagonal common area.

Over the span of nearly six decades, the Line Avenue School operated until it was finally suspended in 1964. After its suspension, the building was slated for demolition in the summer of 1979. Realizing that NSU needed to consolidate its clinical campuses to Shreveport, the university bought the historical building, which is now listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and added other structures to make up what is now the Shreveport College of Nursing and School of Allied Health's campus. Warrington Hall, located one block west of the central campus, houses the radiological sciences' classrooms and labs, as well as the offices for the Northwestern State University Child and Family Network.

With such a rich history in serving academics, the campus definitely fits well with the Nursing and Allied Health program, "I love the architecture of the original building," Carla Jones, a second Level BSN student, said. "It definitely adds perspective to both students and non-students alike."

Shreveport Campus

For many nurses, the profession is more than just a career, it is a passion. The desire to advance nursing practice and ensure safe patient care are the top priorities of those who take their job seriously. Maxine Johnson, who has dedicated her life to nursing, embodies the passion, the dedication and the desire for excellence that nursing is all about.

Johnson graduated from NSU with a BSN degree in 1962. There was never any question as to where she would attain her nursing degree. She said that, "There was no question about which school---two of my older siblings had graduated from NSU and the whole family bleeds purple for NSU." Upon graduation, she worked in labor and delivery at Baton Rouge General Medical Center, where she grew to love maternal-child nursing. Johnson decided to specialize in maternal-child nursing, receiving her MSN from the University of Maryland in Baltimore.

Johnson has seen her fair share of history for both nursing and NSU as a whole. She has seen the expansion of nursing practice to include advanced practice nursing (APRN) such as nurse practitioners, nurse anesthetists, etc. Johnson believes that independent practice for APRNs is vital to the profession's future. Technology has changed dramatically since Johnson started her nursing career. "In nursing education, the integration of technology into the instructional environment has, in my mind, revolutionized nursing education completely---I began with only a chalkboard and home made posters," Johnson said.

Johnson has been appointed by three different Louisiana governors to the Louisiana State Board of Nursing (LSBN) and had the pleasure of serving as the LSBN President. During her time at NSU, she has seen the inception of the ASN, MSN and DNP programs. She has witnessed the establishment of the Beta Chi Chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, been induced into NSU's Hall of Distinction, the Long Purple Line, and the Louisiana State Nurses Association's Hall of Fame. Recently, she was awarded a certificate commemorating 50 years of service to the university.

When asked about any advice she would give to current and future students in the nursing program, Johnson said, "Pursue your dream, Nursing is a rigorous curriculum and one must be able to exercise self-discipline, perseverance, diligent study habits, and hard work to successfully complete the program of study. We must be committed to developing the highest level of competency for use in the care of others---we sometimes hold lives in our hands, and our patients deserve the very best care that we can give them!"

Halloween Celebration

Shreveport Campus

The Student Nurses Association (SNA) and Shreveport Student Government Association work hard to provide luncheons and fun events for the students during stressful weeks. These organizations are here for the students and are driven by student involvement, thus making them an organization of the students, by the students, for the students. They even host a career fair, which allows hospitals across the area to come and recruit soon-to-be RNs. Some students have a job waiting for them once they pass their boards. This helps to ease the stress of an already stressful academic career.

Northwestern State University's College of Nursing and School of Allied Health is dedicated to helping students absorb knowledge and achieve success in their future professions as a nurse or radiology technician. The courses are rigorous and the amount of knowledge to be learned is expansive, and studying consumes a vast majority of a student's time and effort. Through all the lectures, the studying, and the constant clicking of the refresh button to see if grades have been posted, there comes a time when a little fun is permissible.

Nursing is about hard work and diligence, but occasionally students –and faculty –like to enjoy the festivities of the seasons, to relax and enjoy the company of their fellow peers and mentors. One such event is the annual Halloween Party, which is coordinated and implemented by the Shreveport Student Government Association (SSGA). Students were able to enjoy good food, listen to spooky Halloween music hits and even participate in some games. From bingo to a cake-walk, there were plenty of things to do for people to get involved. The costume contest allowed faculty and students alike to dress up as they would Halloween night and spread humor throughout the halls of the campus.

Overall, nursing is both difficult and stressful, but the reward of receiving a RN license and being able to care for others makes it worth every ounce of effort. While nursing school consumes most of a student's life...who says one cannot have a little fun along the way?

Panhellenic Formal Recruitment

Micaiah Richie welcomes new member Andrea Boyd to Sigma Sigma Sigma.

Hairspray, lip gloss and months of planning go into what is probably the single most important event of every sororities' semester calendar: formal recruitment. In September, female students across campus set out to find their perfect sisterhoods. Northwestern State University offers three Panhellenic sororities where women can find their homes - Alpha Omicron Pi, Phi Mu and Sigma Sigma Sigma. Each sorority equally provides collegiate women with endless leadership, scholastic and philanthropic opportunities.

Formal recruitment is the mutual selection process which helps potential new members find their Greek homes. It takes place over a period of three days consisting of an open house, a philanthropy day and a preference tea day. Each day potential new members rank the houses by which they liked the most, and each day they are invited back to different houses until they finally find their perfect matches.

While recruitment is fun and exciting, it requires endless preparation and practice. "I started preparing for recruitment as soon as I got the position," Leighann Westfall, recruitment director of Phi Mu Fraternity said, "but definitely over the summer is where the most work got put in. It takes organization, planning, designing and leadership skills to be the recruitment director, but I definitely couldn't have done it without all my sisters behind me supporting me in everything I did."

While each house is showing off their letters proudly, many of their sisters have put up their letters for a bigger goal: to support Greek life as a whole and help girls not just join their sisterhood, but the one that is perfect for them. These sisters are called Gamma Chis. Gamma Chis dissociate from their sororities from May until the end of formal recruitment. They are not allowed to wear their letters or discuss what house they belong to. "Being a Gamma Chi can be rough," Jessica Rousset, junior, expressed. "You never realize what you have until it's gone. I never appreciated being an AOII sister as much as I did when I had to disassociate. I love my sisters and I never want to have to hide my letters again." While it is tough to hide your letters, Rousset also said, "It was rewarding helping girls find their home in Greek life."

At the end, all three houses reached house totals at 120 women each, and about 100 collegiate women found their homes. "I was so anxious to meet the girls I would get to call my sister," Megan Maley, sophomore, said. "Seeing my bid day buddy run to me was one of my most exciting experiences as a Sigma Sigma Sigma! I was so happy she was my sister!"

Leighann Westfall advises students considering going through formal recruitment in the future to just do it! "You don't have to choose a house at the end," Westfall said, "but think about how many new people you will meet through the process! Meeting people, participating and getting involved is what's going to make you love Northwestern State University!"

Going Greek

Finding a home away from home

College students across the nation must choose whether or not "going Greek" is right for them. Northwestern boasts that over one fifth of the student population is Greek. This is a mighty accomplishment considering the moderately sized, regional university. For many the decision to join a brotherhood or sisterhood comes easy, but for some, the choice to go Greek is about much more than just choosing to wear letters.

The Greek community at NSU has a long-standing tradition of involving leaders, athletes and students who just want to get involved around campus. For most students, the desire to go Greek either stems from their legacies before them or from just a desire to try something new.

"I've always known I wanted to go Greek," said Faith Stanfield, junior education major and member of Phi Mu Fraternity. "My mother, Shannon Stanfield, was a Phi Mu at NSU, so I always knew that is where I was destined to belong," Stanfield said. "Once I joined Phi Mu, I knew I had made the right choice."

First generation Greeks must make the decision to join a fraternity or sorority blindly. They must make a life-long commitment without the guidance of family whom they have trusted for so many years. For first generation Greek and member of Sigma Nu Fraternity, Mikey James, the decision was tough - so he chose to wait a semester.

"I didn't know what I wanted to do, the only thing I knew about Greeks was what I saw on TV," said James. "I saw the impact the Greek community had on campus and knew I wanted to be a part of it. Once I finally joined Sigma Nu, I realized the stigmas and stereotypes were anything but true. I found a family away from home."

Giving Back

What instantly comes to mind when you think of sororities and fraternities? Is it the wild parties that you see on TV that have given you that expectation? Of course, the parties and socials are fun, but Greek life has a lot more to offer than that. Philanthropy is the main priority of every single Greek organization on campus. Philanthropy is the desire to promote the welfare of others by generously donating money or volunteering to good causes. Some of the philanthropic events hosted on campus by various fraternities and sororities are: Vera Bradley Bingo, Dancing with the Sigma's, the PIKE Game Ball Run and much more.

"One of my favorite things about volunteering is being able to go out and spend time with my sisters while also giving back to the community that supports us," Alyssa Buker said. Buker is the head of the service committee for Alpha Omicron Pie, and believes giving back to the community is key in many ways. There are many opportunities to volunteer at Northwestern such as road clean-ups, canned food drives and hospital visits put on by all the Greek organizations.

"It gives me a sense of accomplishment and well-being to know that something great is being done on campus, whether it be raising money for a certain cause or just picking up trash on the road," said Jenna Jeane, a junior and active member of Sigma Sigma Sigma. "I can't wait to see what other great opportunities Greek life offers me."

Cheer

More than just flips

Cheerleading consists of more than just cheer outfits and amazing flips - the members are the face of Northwestern and the spirit of the athletic teams. Cheerleading at NSU is not just cheering on the sidelines - it's a sport of its own. The team consists of 23 NSU students, 13 men and 10 women. Coached by Amy Stepp and Ruth Fruge, these men and women have one thing in common – the passion for cheer.

This is a rebuilding year for the cheer squad. Since so many seniors graduated in May 2015, the team skipped Nationals to focus on training for next year. "Being a cheerleader at NSU puts your face out there and gives you a name for yourself," senior business administration major Hannah Deloney said. "I encourage any freshman who has a passion for cheerleading to try out."

Being a part of the NSU cheer squad takes time and dedication. The team practices three times a week for two hours each day. "Our team is basically one, big, happy family, and I love getting to work hard, and bond with my teammates," sophomore biology major Catie Mccauslin said. "Being a part of cheer at NSU is a great way for to make new memories, develop into outstanding leaders and make lifelong friendships."

Pom Line

Pom precision

When one thinks of the epitome of spirit and service, there is but one group that comes to mind. The Northwestern State University Purple Pizazz Pom Line exemplifies what it means to be superior in both spirit and service for NSU.

The NSU Pom Line has a long-standing tradition of being the best and this title remains with them. Be it a 6:30 a.m. practice or a service event that lasts long into the night, the Pom Line is there in full spirit and will always take on a challenge.

The Pom Line takes a very "hip-hop" approach to their dance styles. While cheer does stunt routines and Dazzlers are jazz, the Pom Line remains with the current and hip-hop style. Captain Faith Stanfield is responsible for over 20 young women and makes sure that they are always on top of their game. "The girls are one big family and when they mess up, it is a reflection on the entire team," Stanfield said. The Pom Line strives for excellence and more often than not, the success is well noticed. "Pom Line can always be seen around campus helping out with service projects and we are always happy to do so," said Stanfield. The Pom Line has always participated in campus projects, but this year they are trying to implement even more.

Co-Captain Stephanie Parker wants nothing more than for all of the girls to succeed. "Each of the girls has a unique personality that we have to work with, we get to know them on a very personal level," Parker said. " We become a sister to them." This relationship is unmatched by another organization and that is one reason Pom Line excels.

The Purple Pizazz Pom Line will forever be a NSU staple and will continue to impress crowds at half-time for many seasons to come. The dedication and love that each member has for their school and community is unrivaled amongst NSU students.

Demon Dazzlers

Razzle dazzle

Ten sparkling uniforms and ten dazzling smiles light up the football field with the Spirit of Northwestern at half time and the crowd goes wild.

The Demon Dazzlers are the official precision jazz dance line of NSU and one of the three spirit groups at Northwestern. Dazzler duties don't stop at football games, but also include performances at basketball games, pep rallies, the Lady of the Bracelet Pageant, the Christmas Gala, and several other events.

"Being a Dazzler is fun!" Co-Captain Rachel Taylor said. "Some of the biggest crowds I've ever danced in front have been on a football field, and it's really fun to look around and see everybody showing school spirit."

Although their high kicks and pirouettes seem effortless, being a dazzler requires fierce work ethic with such a rigorous and physically demanding schedule. They are required to attend workouts, studio and band practices Monday through Friday, and often attend games on Thursdays and Saturdays.

In practices, Dazzlers learn how to move as one unit, working to perfect their skills and learn choreography for their routines. Director Renee Oates along with team captains Rachel Taylor and Allison Dupre collaborate to choreograph routines that showcase talent and school spirit.

The Demon Dazzlers are a family, seeing each other at their most dazzling moments, like during football games, and at some of their darkest moments, like at 8am runs and rehearsals after long nights of studying.

"I love the family aspect of it," junior Dazzler Scarlett Saizan said. "The hardest part is staying positive when you're busy or you're just having a bad day, but you are always surrounded by positive people so that brings you out of your funk."

No matter how busy or tired the dancers may feel, the Demon Dazzlers always put on their game faces and dazzle us anyway.

Spirit of Northwestern

Best sounding band in the land

What do you get when you combine love for music, school spirit and talented students? You get a marching band that is like none other. The Spirit of Northwestern has been a part of NSU legacy for many years. They rile up the crowds with the performance of the Demon Fight Song and provide a wonderful show at halftime. While students, alumni and Demon fans all take part in the school spirit, the band helps provide, it is impossible to understand the close bonds the marching band members share. Senior and four-year Spirit of Northwestern member Stephanie Rabb stated, "Some of the closest friendships that have developed in my life are from participating in marching band." The Spirit of Northwestern is a family both on and off the field. The marching students also give up several weeks of their summer, and much of their time during the fall semester to prepare for football season. Much hard work is involved to prepare the many formations seen during the half-time shows. "My least favorite part is having to rerun charts over and over during rehearsals. However, that is what makes us look and sound good, so it's bearable," Rabb said. While the Spirit of Northwestern gives back to NSU and to the Natchitoches community by marching in the Christmas Festival Parade and hosting a high school marching competition to recruit students, the Spirit of Northwestern also provides its members with the experience of a lifetime. "I feel that I have gotten a lot out of my experience at NSU because of being in the band. I've never missed a home football game and I've participated in all the pep rallies," Rabb said fondly of her experiences. Northwestern is lucky to have a marching band that works as hard as its athletes to provide school spirit at every game, while reaching a standard of excellence that can only be achieved through hard work, dedication and enthusiasm.

Demon Heat
Color Guard

The NSU Color Guard gives students a chance to develop self-discipline skills and responsibility while having a blast performing stunning routines on the field at half-time. The Color Guard performs using flags, rifles and sabers - truly standing out on the field. Students who join Color Guard can expect to make amazing friendships and learn how to work well with a team.

"My favorite part of about being on Color Guard is being on that field at football games as well as in front of a huge audience at Winter Guard competitions" senior, Cady Hunt said. "I also really love being around my Color Guard family. It is more than four years of spinning and learning. It is truly being surrounded by some of my best friends."

Color Guard brings so much spirit to NSU and their routines never fail to amaze the crowds. Any student who is interested in growing into the best version of their self while surrounded by amazing friends should consider checking out Color Guard. "I recommend joining because it gives you something to do that you will truly fall in love with" Hunt said. "I am on my eighth year of spinning and I am truly grateful for what I have learned."

Remembering 9/11

Campus ceremonies mark 14th anniversary of terror attack

Northwestern State University faculty and students gathered around campus flagpoles to commemorate the 14th anniversary of 9/11. The ceremony began at 8:46 a.m., the time when the first hijacked plane, American Airlines Flight 11, hit the North Tower of the World Trade Center.

At each section of the ceremony, members of the NSU Police Department, the Natchitoches Fire Department and the Demon Battalion Army Reserve Officer Training Corps represented the members of the armed forces and first responders present that day.

Northwestern ROTC Cadets lowered the flags to half-staff while the bells of A.A. Fredericks rang. The bells continued to toll throughout the day at the times of the other attacks: at 9:03 a.m. when United Airlines Flight 175 crashed into the South Tower of the World Trade Center, at 9:37 a.m. when American Airlines Flight 77 crashed into the Pentagon and at 10:07 a.m. when United Airlines Flight 93 crashed in a field near Shanksville, Penn.

Reatha Cox, director of First Year Experience and Leadership Development, was on campus when the attacks occurred and watched attacks live on television in the vice president of student affairs' office. The vice president at the time, Dr. Danny Seymour, and Dr. Mary Edith Stacy, the director of Auxiliary Services at the time, were with Cox in the room. Cox said she vividly remembers Stacy telling her "That wasn't an accident."

The motivation to protect and serve was evident in the three cadets who volunteered to participate in the ceremony to honor all of the 2,977 lives lost as a result of the attacks. Dean of Students Frances Conine and ROTC will plan to continue to hold the ceremony annually to remember and "think back to where they were at that moment."

In his speech "For a Declaration of War," President Franklin D. Roosevelt described the bombing of Pearl Harbor as "a date which will live in infamy" in the United States. To Cox, it is important for people to remember 9/11 because, "in five years time, our college freshmen will not have lived that, and it has to be one of those things that people never forget."

The Potpourri

"The Potpourri," NSU's yearbook, is put together by and for the students. Throughout the year, a team of students work tirelessly to put together a flawless product that perfectly encapsulates everything that happened on campus over the last year. Writers and photographers are constantly working to make sure everything that happened on campus is captured so that students have the memories to look back on later.

Ashleigh Daniels, associate editor and writer for The Potpourri, said the best part of being on yearbook staff is having the opportunity to work with the staff. "They are all hard working and a pleasure to work with," Daniels said. "I have learned a lot about time management, communication skills and people skills in general. I've also learned to accept responsibility for my mistakes, but not to make the same mistake twice!"

The Potpourri has received multiple awards, including The Gold and Silver medals from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and first place award from the Associated Collegiate Press. Students interested in gaining experience in media benefit greatly from working for The Potpourri. It's not an easy job, but it's one that is rewarding and allows students to go through college surrounded by friends with similar interests.

"It's a wonderful place to grow as an individual and gain experience working with media and communications," Daniels said. "I want to be a lawyer someday, so all these skills will be invaluable to me in my future endeavors!

Editor-in-Chief Jessie Gabor and Lead Designer Nick Myers worked on a yearbook deadline.

The Current Sauce

NSU's student-run newspaper, The Current Sauce, is a weekly publication that informs students of everything currently going on around campus. From student concerns to the latest trends, The Current Sauce keeps students up to date. With only a week to put "The Sauce" together, writers, photographers and editors work hard to make sure that everything runs smoothly.

Students who work for "The Sauce" have to learn skills like time management, responsibility and team-work. Even when their schedules may seem too hectic, they still have to make sure everything gets done. This hard work benefits them during and after college. Whether students plan to pursue a career in law or journalism, the skills they learn working for the paper help them to grow and reach their full potential.

"My favorite part of working for The Current Sauce is getting to read the paper every week and seeing how much everyone has improved and also just to see the impact it has on students, alumni, faculty and even our own president," Says Damian Glover, social media and online coordinator for "The Sauce."

Working for The Current Sauce gives students a chance to build their resumes and gain experience outside of the classroom. Savanah Meredith, staff writer for The Sauce said she joined because she thought it would be a great way to expand her writing abilities. "Being on staff is a great experience and it's definitely interesting," Meredith said. "I love being a part of The Current Sauce and look forward to semesters to come."

KNWD

With so many clubs and organizations on campus, it's understandable for students to be unsure of where to begin. Everyone is always stressing how important it is to get involved or make your voice heard. For students interested in media, why not try KNWD, the campus radio station? For the musically inclined, KNWD offers a close-knit environment for students to gain experience in the music field, as well as learn how to work well with other people and communicate effectively.

When asked about the best way for students to get involved at KNWD, most agree applying for a position as a DJ is the way to go. "Being a DJ is one of the best ways to get your foot in the door," General Manager, Katelon Ramos said. "It's fun, interactive, and such a great experience."

Ramos, who has been on the staff since her sophomore year, said the best part of working at KNWD is the family oriented environment and the hands on experience. "Whether someone is interested in learning more about music and the world of radio as a hobby or he or she is interested in going into the music industry after college, working for KNWD teaches students important lessons that can be applied to so many aspects of their future professional lives."

John Hurt, DJ of The Anomaly Radio Show, said working for KNWD helped him make awesome friends and relieve stress. "I'm always listening to music and thought being a DJ seemed cool" Hurt said.

Samantha Dunaway who is beginning her first semester as a DJ for "The Hits" radio show said she joined to gain social skills and learn how to be more outgoing. "I love music and thought playing music for other people would be fun" Dunaway said.

College is a huge transitional period of life. Why not go through it with a team of people who share similar interests? No matter the reason for a student's interest in joining KNWD, they will find that they become part of a family who all share a common interest in music.

KNWD General Manager Katelon Ramos and Head of Live Music and Events Kayla Logue did an on-air interview with The Electic Sons

Argus

Argus, NSU's annual art and literary magazine is proof of the incredible talent this campus has to offer. Students can submit their work and a panel of judges choose the best submissions to put into the magazine. Accepting submissions in art, poetry and writing, Argus offers students a place to express themselves creatively.

"People will pick up their copy of Argus and say, 'Wow, this is what my campus has produced. This is something I can be a part of next year," said Editor-in-Chief Maggie Harris. "Maybe their friend was part of it and now they get to have this piece of them forever to look back on. You look back and it's like a bit of history, but it represents a different side of history. It's the creative side that you don't always get to see on a day-to-day basis. Argus is your opportunity to express that."

Argus offers a glimpse into the minds of NSU's students. Through the stress of keeping up with classes, work, sports and whatever else students have on their plates, creating art and literature offers a temporary escape from it all.

"It's people you know, people you pass by every day," Harris said. "It's not like you're reading a book that comes from New York or anywhere else in the world. It's our students, it's your friends. Your peers are creating these fantastic pieces and you never know how talented someone is until you see what they submit to Argus."

Student Acti

Northwestern State University's Student Activities Board, SAB, plans and facilitates fun and entertaining programs for the Natchitoches, Leesville and Alexandria campuses. SAB hosts several events throughout the school year. Some of the bigger events hosted by SAB and SAB committees are Homecoming Week, Spring Fling, Hall of Horrors Haunted House, Vegas Night, Unite to Fight and Lady of the Bracelet.

SAB hosts numerous other smaller events year-round. To search for acts to bring to the school, SAB members attended APCA in the fall. New member to SAB Brandon Garcia got the chance to be a part of the selection process. "I had the opportunity to go to APCA which is a conference that showcases potential acts for schools," Garcia said. "It was amazing to see all the potential acts that could be brought to the school and the rest of the students."

There are 32 members in SAB: 20 reps, five committee heads, and seven exec members. To be a member of SAB, NSU student must have at least a 2.5 GPA and be free on Mondays and Wednesdays at 2. All students are welcome to attend SAB's meetings on Wednesdays in the Cane River Room. Students can express concerns at the meetings, and can get the opportunity to see how students' money is being spent while learning what SAB is planning to put on. "SAB is a great organization to join if you want to meet a lot of people and put on great events for students," vice president of SAB, Anthony Cannata said.

Student Governn

The Student Government Association is an organization that facilitates multiple things that affect students at Northwestern State and ensures to make a positive influence on campus. Students get the chance to voice their opinions and make their new home a better place. SGA Secretary and senior Sarah Evans said, "Instead of sitting around talking about what I don't like about NSU, I'm able to have a direct impact on the campus and change it for the better. I love being able to fight for the students on a daily basis."

The newest change that will occur on Northwestern State's campus is the placing of lights on organization row. President Matthew Whitaker said, "We've been working on getting lights on Organization row since former president Kyla Winey's administration, and I think that they did a great job laying out the foundation to get the project up and running." He also said that this project was one of his top initiatives this year. Organization row is where the BCM, Kappa Sigma Fraternity, Phi Mu Fraternity and the Sigma Sigma Sigma houses are located and will enable a safer environment for these students who are held in meetings that normally run late into the night. Lincoln Pearce, who is a member of Phi Mu Fraternity, is very excited that this bill has been passed. She said, "I definitely think that it is a great thing! I often stay at the Phi Mu house late at night and feel uncomfortable walking to my car alone, so getting lights will make it a lot safer and make people feel much better."

SGA is also working to revamp their speaker series to educate the student body on a multitude of topics, and is doing a clothes drive for Teen Challenge during the whole month of October. If you have the urge to voice your opinion, this organization is the place to be. Having the opportunity to make definite change is what makes SGA so important.

"I tell the senators all the time that we are the movers and shakers on campus and we dictate the changes that are made," said Whitaker. "SGA has brought about many changes to Northwestern State's campus, and they do it because they care about the students that call NSU their home."

Fishing Team

Bassmaster College Series Champs

NSU's fishing team gives students who enjoy fishing a place to gain experience while having fun and making lifelong friendships. Members of the fishing team have the opportunity to go to tournaments all over the state, where they compete to catch the heaviest bass. If one wins an award, they may even gain sponsors, which are very helpful in getting one's name out there.

Thomas Merchant, 20, joined the fishing team his sophomore year. He said his favorite thing about being on the team is getting to meet new people and travel to new places. "Fishing on a college team has taught me that anything you practice for prior to the tournament can change in a day. You have to have trust in your fishing partner and you need someone you can rely on to help put fish in the boat alongside you so you're working as a team and not alone."

Whether students are interested in fishing as a hobby or even professionally, the fishing team offers an opportunity to learn skills such as patience, teamwork and determination. Joining the fishing team can help give students the experience they need to get their name out there if they want to continue on to fishing professionally. "I would tell anyone who was interested in joining, to come to our monthly meeting" Merchant said. "Whenever I find anyone who likes fishing, I tell them to come join the team and what a great experience it is."

Senior Spotlight:

John Pearce

John Pearce had one goal in mind when he started school at Northwestern State University, and that was to leave his mark on campus. He did exactly what he planned to do. Pearce is a senior communication major minoring in business with a concentration in rhetoric. He is a part of the Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society, Order of Omega, Student Government Association, Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity and was part of the 2015 Northwestern Homecoming Court as well as being a past Freshman Connector.

Pearce has held many positions in these organizations, but his major focus throughout his years as a student was fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, otherwise known as PIKE.

Pearce never considered joining a fraternity until he came upon PIKE. "I saw the opportunity to improve something that would reflect my character and personality, and what better way than to help rebuild a fraternity that banishes all the negative stereotypes," Pearce said.

Pearce joined in 2012 where he took the role of scholarship chairman and worked his way to being the current president. Many other positions that he has held include brotherhood chairman, continuing education chairman, internal vice president and recruitment chairman.

PIKE was chartered in 2014, and they now reside in their new home that would not have been possible without Pearce and other members who helped to make it happen.

Pearce's endless motivation and dedication has led him to be the successful individual that he is today. His advice to incoming freshman is to be involved because it just makes everything much easier. He said, "If you are busy doing good things, you don't do bad things."

After graduation, Pearce plans on moving to either New Orleans or Houston to do sales for pharmaceutical companies. Pearce has definitely fulfilled his goal to leave his mark on campus and has impacted Northwestern in the way he had hoped upon first arriving.

Brian Cook

Brian Cook, senior mass communications major from Baton Rouge, came to NSU as many students do, with hopes of a fresh start. After touring NSU for the first time, Cook knew he had found his home. Entering college with multiple scholarships, Cook immediately became involved in everything he could and never looked back.

While attending NSU, Cook discovered a passion for journalism. The two-time recipient of the Rondray Hill Mass Communication Scholarship looks forward to entering the journalism field after college and taking advantage of every opportunity that comes his way.

"There's nowhere in particular that I would like to go" Cook said. "My favorite part of college has been joining many organizations and meeting new people daily. Getting involved was one of the best things I've done since starting college and it has brought me a long way."

Cook lists joining Greek life as one of the greatest decisions he made in college. As vice president of the Theta Chi Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Cook said the experience he gained because of Greek life is priceless. "It has opened my eyes to so much and many people look up to me because of that."

Among his list of accomplishments are the President's List, Dean's List, Honor Roll and Homecoming Court. He is involved in the Helping Hands Volunteering Organization, NAACP and AAC. He is also a former SGA senator and chairman of Club Sports.

Being so involved has taught Cook many valuable lessons about life. "It's always good to meet new people," he said earnestly. "You never know who you might need or run into 10 years from now."

Cook encourages working hard and never giving up. "Stay optimistic," he said when asked about his advice for other students at NSU. "Just because everything good isn't happening right now doesn't mean it will never happen. You never know what's around the corner."

Senior Spotlight:

Alexia Mullaly

You may have seen musical theatre major Alexia Mullally belt her face off as Maureen in "Rent," but have you ever heard her surprisingly accurate impression of Yzma from "Emperor's New Groove?"

Mullally is an eclectic individual. Her passions are not limited to singing, but include an affinity for sandals, spaghetti and steaming her vocal chords. "I sleep with a humidifier like 10 inches from my face," Mullally said.

Vocal rest is important for Mullally who has been in several theatre productions including Uncle Vanya, Hairspray, The Giving Tree, Modern in Motion III, Sweeney Todd the Demon Barber of Fleet Street, Once on this Island and Rent.

Mullally took voice lessons when she was younger, but the adolescent struggle to fit in kept her from telling her friends. She became a full-fledged Broadway baby in high school after her mom signed her up for a musical theater camp one summer.

"I love performing for people and I love making people laugh," Mullally said. "I love getting the applause right when you're finished and after you've worked really, really hard and for a long time to get it right."

Mullally has already played two of her dream characters at NSU: Ms. Lovett in "Sweeney Todd the Demon Barber of Fleet Street" and Maureen in "Rent." Her ultimate dream role is Eponine in "Les Miserables."

Mullally has a special ability to play a diverse set of characters and she is certainly a diverse character herself. She has a love for Pinterest crafts, painting, the Harry Potter books, and making people laugh with her vocal impressions.

"I have always wanted to do voice overs," Mullally said. "I also love doing straight plays and I wouldn't be opposed to trying film in the future."

Mullally's time as a Broadway baby on Front Street has come to a close, but there is a whole world of possibilities waiting for her.

"There is so much outside of Natchitoches," Mullally said. "And I'm ready to experience what the world has to offer."

Damian Glover

When Damian Glover came to college, he knew he wanted to get involved on campus. After not being involved in high school, he sought out a campus organization that would give him the opportunity to make a difference on campus. Glover joined the Student Activities Board, which engaged him to get more involved on campus. Now Glover is involved in eight organizations: Student Activities Board, The Current Sauce, Unite To Fight, KNWD radio station, Students With a Target, Peer Mentor, Campus Insider and Theta Chi Fraternity.

Glover is from Lafayette and graduated from Lafayette High in 2012. When Glover first came to NSU, his major was Secondary Education with a concentration in English, but when Glover got involved on campus, it changed his life goals. He decided to change his major to English with a concentration in professional writing. He plans to return to Northwestern for graduate school to get a doctorate in Student Affairs. He would like to work at the university in student life and hopefully take Dr. Henderson's role as president of the university.

"Student life is a part of the college experience," Glover said. "Getting involved is the part of college students think about besides getting a degree. Student life opens your eyes to many things, things you cannot learn in the classroom, people you would not normally talk to and experiences you will not forget."

Marie Robichaux

Marie Robichaux is not the average senior at Northwestern State University. Over the past three years, Robichaux has become referred to as "Hula Hoop Girl." What started out as her senior project has grown to be something much more unique. After being inspired to learn how to hula-hoop from a friend for the project, Robichaux taught hula dance to 9 and 10 year olds and talked to them about fitness, health and body image.

Since learning how to hula hoop, Robichaux said, "I've become more expressive. I have more self-esteem. And I've grown to have really positive body image, which is something that I struggled with in high school."

More than just a hobby, Robichaux is now a professional in the dance style. She performs regularly with the Shreveport Hoop Troop and is a flow artist and fire performer for Spinner Entertainment.

Just like hula hooping, Robichaux believes art is a way she can express herself. At NSU, she is majoring in Fine and Graphic Arts with a concentration in Studio Art and a minor in Psychology. After college, she plans to become an art therapist and work with either veterans or the elderly.

"A picture is worth a thousand words, and sometimes what you want to express cannot be said in words," she said. "The English language lacks in so many ways communicating feelings and putting it on paper or building it or forming it in any way says so much more about how you feel."

Although she has always enjoyed art, she was inspired to become an artist her senior year of high school while taking her first actual art class. " I came here and took one drawing class," she said, "I fell even more in love with the department and the whole idea of making art. And three years later, here I am still making art."

Outside of school, Robichaux is involved in numerous organizations, including Alpha Omicron Pi, Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society, Gamers' Guild and Kappa Pi Art Fraternity. She is currently the vice president of Kappa Pi.

Robicahux also serves as the director of Fairview Alpha Art Club at Fairview Alpha Elementary School where she brings an art program to at-risk children who would not be exposed to art otherwise.

"Working with Fairview Alpha has been really rewarding," she said, "because I have been able to watch the kids transform into more confident, happy human beings."

From being a professional hula-hoop performer and artist to being involved on campus and in the community, Marie Robichaux adds something special to Northwestern.

Katelon Ramos

If one ever passes by the KNWD radio station in Kyser Hall, Katelon Ramos is almost always there working on the next KNWD event, listening to the student-run radio shows or spending time with the KNWD staff. As KNWD general manager, what else would you expect?

However, if not found at the station, she is coordinating the logistics for Unite to Fight, another organization Ramos has been a part of for three years. Ramos, a mass communication major, also became a part of the N-Siders, a new organization on campus dedicated to assisting and supporting the Department of Student Life.

When not busy with school or the radio station, Ramos, a Texas native, spends her spare time at music festivals and crafting for the next KNWD event.

"Attending Northwestern helped me grow as an individual," Ramos said. "I have learned people skills, leadership skills and professional skills from attending school and being involved in so many different areas of Northwestern. I feel confident that I can go into the music business industry and excel simply based off of the hands-on experiences that I have had as a student at NSU."

Ramos said, "My favorite memory while at NSU would have to be last year's trip to the College Media Association conference in New York City. Anyone who knows me knows that New York City is my favorite place in the country, so spending a whole week in my favorite city while learning more about something I love - media – was the greatest part of my college expierence."

Senior Spotlight:

Joshua De Alba

If you have attended a theatre production or dance concert at Northwestern State University in the past four years, chances are you have eiher seen Joshua William DeAlba perform, or you have seen someone performing his choreography. De Alba has been cast in at least one theatrical production or dance concert since his first semester at NSU.

Creativity and dance is a way of life for the 21-year-old Theatre major who has been performing since the age of 8 when his mom put him into jazz and tap classes. But he started to get more involved with dance through his involvement with his high school's band. He initially wanted to be a music director, but his foundation in music helped him to become a better choreographer because he could apply his musical knowledge to the choreography.

"Dancing is the visual interpretation of the music, and what an incredible way to merge the things that I love," he said. In his time at Northwestern, DeAlba has continued to explore his love of dance through performance and creation of his own works. DeAlba has performed in multiple shows such as Northwestern State University's Christmas Gala, West Side Story, Avenue Q, Hairspray and Oklahoma. He has also danced in several senior dance concerts, Modern in Motion and The Giving Tree. He also created some of his own works.

As a choreographer DeAlba takes inspiration from Ohad Naharin, a choreographer for the Batsheva Ballet and creator of the Gaga dance movement, and Jerome Robbins, a choreographer who worked in early Broadway and the New York City Ballet. He describes his choreography style as, "a combination of the two, a little bit of contemporary ballet, a little bit of Gaga and a little bit of me." De Alba has composed works for Student Theatre Organization's Cabaret, Make Your Own Theatre, flash mobs, the Mrs. Northwestern Lady of the Bracelet's contestant dance and Lip Syncs. He even choreographs for color guards, dance teams and media companies during school breaks when he returns home to Central Florida. But he received recognition for his choreography at the American College Dance Association for his piece, "Manna."

"Dance can be about a lot of things, but at it's origin roots dance is about expression....It's about letting yourself go," he said. This is even reflected in his casting of dancers in production because said when selecting dancers for a piece he is more likely to select the dancer with the most expression in their movements rather than the best dancer.

DeAlba also expanded his creativity into the world of make-up art. It first started with his role as a drag queen in Avenue Q, and afterwards other people began to ask for his help. He has worked as the makeup artist for Michael Carrier who played Angel Dumott Schunard in Rent; He also helped the Homecoming King and Queen, Matthew Whittaker and Brittany McConathy, achieve their Hunger Games Capitol looks for Lipsync.

With such a long list of accomplishments and interests, DeAlba definitely plans for a career in teaching and composing dance. However, he doesn't plan to go to work on a career immediately. DeAlba first wants to move to New Orleans and save money to travel the world. He doesn't want to immediately jump into the choreography and dance world because, "If I plowed strait into my career, I'd be tired and bored."

"There's no way that it couldn't influence my work and that's what I want," said DeAlba of his future travels.

Letter from the Editor

Jessie Gabor Editor-in-Chief

After reading through possibly every single "Letter from the Editor" in the past Potpourri editions, I'm still having a hard time putting my experience into words. Serving as editor has been anything but easy, but has been worth every minute my staff and I have put into it. Becoming editor has taught me about how much work is put into getting a yearbook published.

The book's theme is "Moving Forward." Since Dr. Henderson has become president, the feel on campus is now much more proressive. This is evident in the new departments, construction on campus and even graduation. There is a new feeling of pride and spirit throughout campus. I wanted the Potpourri to have that same feeling.

This book would not have been possible without the countless hours and devotion the staff put into this book. Every story, photo and design helped make this book what it is, and I could not be more grateful for the dedication and passion that shows on every single page.

A special thank you to Nick – for the late hours and dedication you've had for the yearbook during your entire college career. Your creativity is evident in this book.

To Mrs. Masson and Daniel– I'm so lucky to have had two great advisers throughout the process. The dedication has not gone unnoticed. The advice and support has helped the Potpourri reach new heights that could not have been possible without you both.

To the students and faculty – Thank you for the continued support and help during this process. It's a tedious task to try to cover the entire year in just under 300 pages, but I hope we have made something that the student body can be proud of.

When news struck of Dr. Webb's passing, the entire Potpourri staff felt how important it would be for this book to be dedicated to him. Dr. Webb's life and devotion to NSU will never be forgotten.

I am blessed to have been able to serve Northwestern State University through this publication. It's without a doubt been a highlight in my collegiate career and one of the proudest moments of my life.

The Potpourri is the official yearbook of Northwestern State University located in historic Natchitoches. The 2016 edition of the Potpourri was created entirely by a staff of students of Northwestern.

All full-full time students (12+ hours) of any Northwestern campus enrolled in the fall 2015 semester may receive a book. Those students who did not pay the student association fee in the fall or those wanting additional copies may purchase a copy for $25. Those wishing to have a book mailed to them may submit their address and a $10 shipping fee to Daniel Thiels at 225 Kyser Hall, Northwestern State University, Natchitoches, LA 71497. The 2016 and past editions can also be found in PDF format at www.nsula.edu/yearbook

The 105th volume of the Potpourri was printed on 150gsm Korean matte paper by Multi-Media Technology Group of Poplarville, Miss. The book was produced in the USA and printed in Korea using Adobe Creative Suite 6 on Apple iMac computers running OS X Yosemite version 10.10.5 with a press run of 2,500.

The headline font is Adelle Sans Bold 80pt.
The sub-headline font is Adelle Sans Bold 36 pt.
